

Attorney General Seeks Sustained Cooperation of Public In War On Crime

WASHINGTON — Behind the Crime Conference opening here today is some basic, homespun philosophy by its chief inspirator, Homer Cummings.

Not long after he became Attorney General, Cummings decided that all the sleuths at his command could not cure crime unless he had the co-operation of the American public, as long as the movies were indirectly extolling the criminal and the flapper glorifying him.

So he set out to make the public crime conscious. This week's conference is not intended as a ballyhoo movement, as a sporadic, sudden drive against crime. What Cummings is planning is a long-sustained campaign that will grow in volume.

To this end delegates convening today are not merely crime experts, lawyers, representatives of prison associations, etc., but also representatives of women's clubs, the press, radio, the motion picture industry and from a broad sociological field.

The plan is to put the problem of crime before the public and keep it there, rather than the usual reverse of the people putting the problem up to the Government.

Crime Remedies

Ever since the Justice Department announced its plans for a crime conference it has been deluged with almost as many suggestions on how to eradicate crime as Franklin Roosevelt gets on how to end depression.

One of all laundry tags. Another urged the segregation of all children into concentration camps where they would not be allowed to reproduce.

But the prize "nut" letter attributed crime to the United States Navy and the bad example set by sailors while on shore leave.

So far, Attorney General Cummings has refrained from showing this letter to his colleague the Secretary of the Navy but the temptation is rather great.

Sugar Strategy

Beet sugar growers have their lobbyists secretly at work on a neat plan to junk the Costigan sugar quota act, and if certain Senators are not careful they may fall in the trap.

One of the biggest beet sugar companies have been chafing against the Costigan Act ever since it was passed. Actually they received a larger quota than they were able to fill. Also they admit that the quota system caused a price rise in sugar.

But they claim the Act is cumbersome to administer, and particularly they object to provisions curtailing child labor.

These objections, however, are not made openly. Even an open attack during the coming Congress is not considered good strategy.

Instead the attack is being made on the ground that the sugar quota system favors Cuba.

And to make the drive both subtle and effective, the beet sugar lobbyists have hatched a scheme to persuade Borah or some other leading Senator to launch a tirade against the State Department's policy in Cuba.

Borah, they know, would almost

Penal Court to Handle Cases Set Up by League of Nations

EXPULSION STOPPED

Rumanian Leader in Frantic Peace Plea

By International News Service

In an effort to solve the grave dispute between Yugoslavia and Hungary over the assassination of King Alexander, France has drafted a proposal for creation of an international penal court to handle terrorism cases.

The proposal, falling far short of Yugoslavia's demands for satisfaction, was drafted while powers met at Geneva in a tense atmosphere and struggled to find a path out of the maze of international difficulties.

This and other efforts by the big powers to effect a peaceful solution resulted directly from the disconcerting revelation that Yugoslavia is resolved to seek satisfaction independently if the league of nations fails to pin responsibility for the assassination on Hungary.

Meanwhile, the Yugoslav government ordered immediate cessation of expulsion of Hungarians. Watches at the border reported only 24 emigres crossed yesterday.

GENEVA, Dec. 10.—A dramatic plea for conciliation of the dispute between Yugoslavia and Hungary, punctuated with a vigorous criticism of the latter's stand, was voiced today by Nicholas Titulescu, veteran foreign minister of Rumania.

Titulescu took the rostrum when the league of nations council reconvened in the late afternoon in a desperate effort to find a conciliation of the crisis after France had drafted a proposal for creation of a permanent super-court to deal with terrorist acts.

STOCKHOLM, Dec. 10.—Acting in concert with other members of the league of nations, Sweden today decided to send a contingent of troops to the international army being formed to police the Saar valley before and during the forthcoming plebiscite.

Santa Claus Worrying About Circleville's Many Fine Children

Old Saint Nick, in other words Santa Claus, is beginning to wonder if Circleville and Pickaway-co children do not want any toys for Christmas.

A week ago Santa Claus informed The Herald through one of his gnomes that he would try to accommodate all who had letters published. Only a few children have written to Santa Claus but his gnomes, who happened here again this morning checking up some "kiddies" on whom Santa Claus had reported, said that there still is plenty of time but that letters should be sent in this week since the time is growing short.

Incidentally the firemen need many more toys before they will be able to take care of the many needy children of the city. They have a good supply of material on hand but children who have discarded playthings have been slow about bringing them in. If you have toys and will call the fire department someone will be glad to call for them; that is if you are unable to deliver them yourself.

TULSA, Okla., Dec. 10.—Homer F. Wilcox, Jr., son of a Tulsa oil millionaire, sought for more than a week for questioning in the John F. Gorrell, Jr., murder case, was surrendered today by his father.

The father, head of the H. F. Wilcox Oil and Gas company, and son immediately were closeted with Police and Assistant County Prosecutor Thomas Gilmer.

TULSA, Okla., Dec. 10.—The mystery surrounding the slaying of John Gorrell, Jr., socially prominent Tulsa youth, deepened today as police investigated the death of Sidney Born, Jr.

SHOT THROUGH HEAD

Born, who was 19, the son of a University of Tulsa professor, was found with two bullet wounds in his head a few blocks from the spot where the body of Gorrell was found Thanksgiving night.

The youth died in a hospital last night. Though detective sergeants declared the youth had committed suicide, authorities today investigated the possibility the boy had been murdered.

Born drove Phil Kennamer, son of a federal judge, who is being held for the slaying of Gorrell, to meet Gorrell the night Gorrell was killed. According to police Kennamer has confessed shooting Gorrell, claiming he killed his friend in self-defense.

OHIO TO PROBE ROSS ELECTION

Myers to Send Investigator; Attorney Defies Order of Election Board.

CHILLICOTHE, Dec. 10.—Defying the Ross-co board of elections which is probing the outcome of the vote in this county, John P. Phillips, attorney for several candidates, today demanded an open inquiry while the board of elections was studying the law.

Phillips when ordered to leave the room where investigation of the ballot was being made refused to move and said he would resist force. His opinion is that any taxpayer who wishes can be present when a contest is being determined. The meeting was then adjourned.

In the meantime the office of Secretary of State George S. Myers has instructed Mayor Walter Barrett that it will thoroughly investigate the vote in Ward 1 Precinct F where gross irregularities were alleged in the recent election. It was expected that James Welker, investigator, and possibly Assistant Secretary of State Ray M. Allison would be sent here.

It was seen possible today that all precincts in the county may be recounted.

FIVE MORE JAILED IN NARCOTIC RAID

CLEVELAND, Dec. 10.—Continuing their sweeping attack against a large dope ring said to be preying on Cleveland junior high school boys and girls, federal agents today raided an alleged east side opium den and arrested five men, two of them from Akron.

Joseph Bell, chief narcotic agent for the Cleveland district, announced that further Cleveland raids were planned for today and tonight.

NIRA ON TRIAL

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10.—The NIRA, keystone of the Roosevelt recovery program, was placed up on the seat of judgment in the supreme court for the first time today.

With the eyes of the entire business world focused on the case, the high court was ready to hear argument on constitutionality of the NIRA, the oil code and regulations issued under this code.

While it is possible the case might be disposed of without finally deciding the vital legal problems of the NRA as general business is affected, government counsel hoped for a sweeping decision.

A decision is expected before the new session of congress, which will consider making the NRA permanent, gets well under way.

GREATER FARM INCOMES SEEN BY PRESIDENT

Three Conditions Remain to be Fulfilled, Roosevelt Declares

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10.—President Roosevelt told the American Farm Bureau federation at Nashville, Tenn., today over long distance telephone that he hoped an even larger farm income increase in 1935 than the thousand million dollar 1934 increase over the 1933 farm income.

The president, who spoke into a telephone at his White House desk, warned the convention, however, that the hope for an increase next year can be realized only if the American people fulfill three conditions.

SEES 3 CONDITIONS

The three conditions necessary to increased farm income next year, as the president sees the national economic picture, are:

1. Increased industrial production to expand the market for farm products.

2. An increase in imports to pay for a larger portion of America's export trade.

3. Continued adjustment of agricultural production to fit an existing market.

Mr. Roosevelt, in voicing the brief greeting to the farm bureau federation, called attention to the fact that this year's increase in farm income came in spite of the worst drought on record. Such an increase in the face of unavoidable obstacles, the president characterized as a significant accomplishment.

URGES SUPPORT

After outlining the three conditions necessary to an improvement next year, the president concluded his greeting:

"To fulfill these three requirements, I ask a continuation of the splendid support you have so unselfishly given in the past."

Miner Entrapped by Slide Cries, "Father! I am Dying"

GREYSTONES, Wicklow, Irish Free State, Dec. 10.—"Father! I am dying."

This anguished cry from beneath a rock slide in the Wicklow mountains this afternoon caused rescue workers to lower a priest to the spot where Charles O'Leary was trapped and administer the last sacraments.

O'Leary was caught in a rock-slide in a deep well. Rescuers hewed frantically at the rocks over the week-end and reached within a foot of him when new falls of sand necessitated temporary abandonment of their efforts.

The entire country waited to hear the result of the heroic rescue attempts and praised O'Leary's stoic courage. He failed in an attempt to amputate his own leg without an anesthetic.

Judy Gordon Handles Reins of Organization With Steele, Merriman, Parks, Purcell, Hegele and Barnes Called to Practice; Play Christmas.

The Circleville Athletic Club basketball team will again take the hardwood this winter with the first game to be played Christmas night if a suitable opponent can be found.

It is possible Bliss college will be the foe but negotiations have not yet been completed. Judy Gordon will run the team having gained permission from the Athletic club officials.

SEVEN ON TEAM

On the squad will probably be Gordon, Art Steele, Eve Merriman, Boyce Parks, Carl Purcell, Joe Barnes and Bill Hegele. This outfit worked together nicely last year and with Purcell and Hegele each adding a year to their experience they should prove real assets to the CAC outfit. Tubby Vierebone will play when he is home.

Home games will be played every week under the plan—but as yet nothing has been done about a schedule. Out-of-town games will also be sought.

Whether an independent league could be organized to play in preliminary jousts prior to the Club games is not certain but a number of cage enthusiasts have been mentioning trying to organize such a loop.

Announcement that a Club will support a team is greeted with enthusiasm by local sports enthusiasts.

HIGH PLAY TWO

County games this week include: Scioto at Walnut; Darby at New Holland; Perry at Pickaway; Jackson at Deer Creek; Washington at Monroe; Salt Creek at Ashville.

About This And That

COLLIER'S THIS WEEK

The final All-American football team, and there have been plenty of them, will be announced this week when Collier's is placed on sale at the newsstands—There are just two teams that receive national recognition: Collier's selected by Grantland Rice, and that of the All-American football board of coaches headed by Glenn S. Warner, Elmer Layden, Edward L. Casey, Christy Walsh and Howard H. Jones.

BORRIES FAVORED

Just who will be on the Collier's team is a matter for conjecture, but you can bet the East won't be completely ignored as it was on the All-American board—Pittsburgh where Charlie Hartwig was selected for a guard position was as far east as that traveled, and that was about far enough.

GIANTS WHIP BEARS, 30-13

NEW YORK, Dec. 10.—That upset can occur even in professional football was proved Sunday when the New York Giants led by invincible Ken Strong scored 30-13 touchdown in the final period to defeat the Chicago Bears, 30-13, in as amazing a game as has ever

although Buzz Borries of the Navy should rate a place if anyone on the Atlantic seaboard does—He was a star.

MIDWEST IN LEAD

The team named by the All-American board included: Moscrip of Stanford and Hutson of Alabama, ends; Maddox of Kansas State and Barclay of North Carolina, tackles; Monahan of Ohio State and Hartwig of Pitt, guards; Robinson of Notre Dame, center; Howell of Alabama, quarterback; Berwanger of Chicago and Lund of Minnesota, halfbacks, and Grayson of Stanford, fullback.

STATE SURPRISES

been seen here. With the victory went the world's championship at $621 for each player. Each Bear received $414. Net receipts of the fray were $64,504.

The Bears enjoyed what seemed to be a comfortable 13-3 lead in the third period after a touchdown by Nagurski and two field goals by Jack Manders. Strong's field goal in the first period was the initial Giant score.

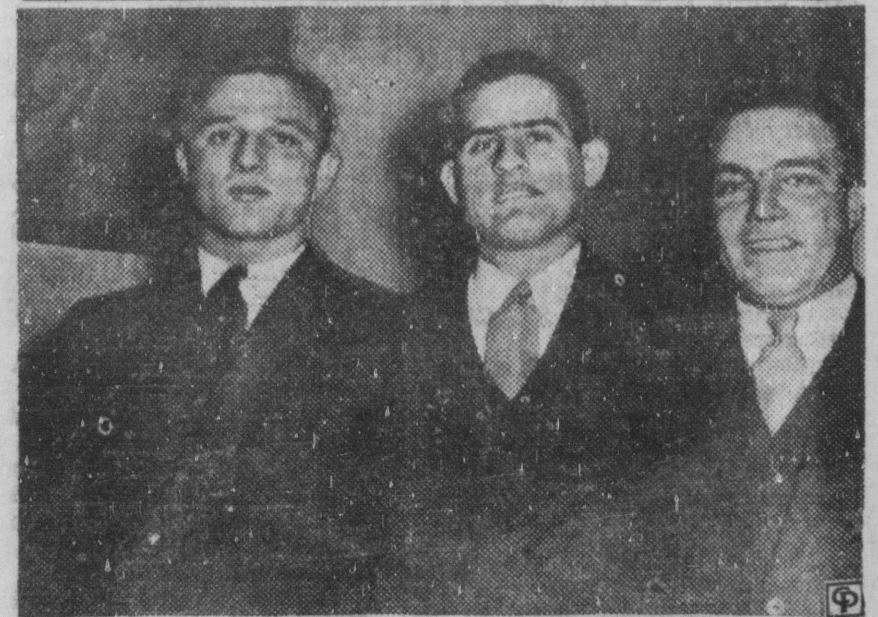

The third period ended 13-3 but the Giants pulled every trick they knew from the bag, took advantage of several clear-cut breaks and went on to victory. There was no stopping the running and passing attack of the gothamites.

In this final period Strong scored twice, once on a 42-yard run, Frankian took a pass to tally and Danowski also crossed the goal.

The Bears were helpless. The defeat was the first taken by the Bears since the 1933 season when the Giants beat them 3-0 on a Ken Strong field goal. The Chicago team was 2 to 1 and 3 to 1 favorite before the game. The Brooklyn Dodgers and St. Louis Gunners played in another thriller at St. Louis with Brooklyn winning 17-14 on a field goal by Ralph Kercheval, former University of Kentucky star.

MANILA, P. I., Dec. 10.—Babe Ruth and his barnstorming big leaguers, defeated the Filipino Olympic baseball team 7 to 3 in a hard fought game before 22,000 spectators here today. Ruth failed to get a hit, was struck out once, but Earl Averill made two homers and Charley Gehring chalked up one.

This two-piece afternoon dress—simple enough to wear to work and at the same time dressy enough to wear for a dinner engagement after working hours—is a clever answer to a busy woman's wardrobe problems. The sleeves, cut in one with the sides of the bodice, give a soft fullness to the blouse—the front panel drapes slightly at the throat and buttons over the left shoulder—and the skirt is frothed by a trim panel which carries out the bodice lines and breaks into kick pleats at the knees. And notice the deep triangular yoke which supplies chic "back interest!" Contrast may be used as shown, but you will find all one color equally smart.

Pattern 9212 may be ordered only in sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, 20, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42. Size 16 requires 3 1/2 yards 29 inch fabric and 3/4 yard contrasting.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for EACH MARIAN MARTIN pattern. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, the STYLE NUMBER and SIZE of each pattern.

Household Arts

If you are anxious to add a personal touch to a simple gift, decorate it with one of these lovely brocaded edgings. They run in size from a tiny one that will make a choice handkerchief edging to a lovely wide flit edge that will finish a pillow case most beautifully. The Irish crochet—it's just the simple mesh with dainty roses on it—is just the thing for lingerie or for a lacy touch on a collar; it will certainly dress it up. The one edging lends itself to the use of two collars and if you do it in a string, you can make a striking shelving for your linen closet.

Besides all these uses, doilies, tray cloths, towels and many other household accessories are also enhanced by these laces. The edgings run in size from 1/4 inch to 1 1/4 inches in width. In pattern 5266 you will find exact directions for making the edgings shown as well as charts for those in flit chochet; suggestions for their uses, and material requirements. To obtain this pattern send 10 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred) to The Herald Household Arts Dept., 124 W. Main-st., Circleville, O.

TRACK CLEARED FOR PROGRESS

THE final month of 1934 finds America with a more substantial basis for confidence in faster progress toward recovery than has existed at any time since the depression entered upon its more acute phases. The financial world, for one thing, is reassured and the benefits of its changed state of mind are reflected in many ways.

One of the most impressive evidences of improvement is to be found in the fact that the national income, which dropped from $86,106,000,000 in 1929 to $49,560,000,000 in 1933 is expected to show an increase of about $9,000,000,000 for the current year.

Furthermore, security quotations have recovered to the best level since mid-summer and some progress has been made toward stimulating a demand for the so-called durable goods—machinery and other factory equipment, railroad rolling stock, electrical appliances, automobiles and trucks.

Farmers' incomes for the first nine months of this year were $834,000,000 more than for the corresponding period of last year. Export trade has revived somewhat and even real estate in many cities throughout the country is showing renewed life. Disturbances between employers and workers have become less frequent and less serious and a most heartening circumstance is the certainty that the Christmas shopping season, which is now under way, will be the best in four years.

With apprehension vanished, substantial gains accomplished during the last four years and the track cleared for the drive ahead, the new year gives every promise of the restoration of a generous measure of the prosperity normally enjoyed by the nation.

AUTO INDUSTRY LEADS

THAT business can be stimulated by artificial means is demonstrated at this time each year by the automobile industry. Unlike most enterprises the automotive industry goes after business instead of waiting for business to come to it. It has developed its own art of "making" business.

Perhaps the greatest trade stimulant ever invented was the annual introduction of new automobile models and the automobile shows at which they are exhibited. They come along when the tide of this business is at its ebb and have never failed to produce enough demand to keep the entire industry going through the winter months.

The new cars and shows are certain to arouse widespread interest in motors and motoring with resultant benefits to those enterprises which depend for existence on the motor car, and that means more business and less depression.

What a pity the steel industry cannot bring out new models every year! Many divisions of the textile industry do, as do also many small enterprises. But it seems that American initiative and ingenuity might profitably go in for more artificial trade stimulants.

A free man is one who will not submit to dictation except in the privacy of home.

Don't blame the rich guy. He wouldn't act superior if other people didn't act inferior.

CAROLINE by RUTH DEWEY GROVES

CHAPTER XXIX

The jigsaw puzzle was not all put together that night; Caroline completed it the next day, and was glad that Malcolm was not with her when she saw the full picture. It was, she believed, part of a dream that he had woven about her—a dream as old as life itself. As she looked at the picture—a beautiful little cottage, as exquisite and perfect in architectural detail as any mansion, she lost even the echo of doubt that Malcolm loved her. Lovely as the house was, he would hardly wish to own it unless he had found the girl he wanted to be its mistress. It was going to be harder than ever to tell him now that someday she was going to marry Howard.

Howard brought her flowers again that afternoon and she saw in them a way to reveal the truth gradually to Malcolm. In the evening Malcolm came with a library book she had asked him to get for her. He saw Howard's flowers in a bowl on the table near the davenport. But this time he did not exclaim about them. His face, when he turned to Caroline, showed that he had been surprised. A slightly blank look remained upon it until he took his departure. Their conversation had been dull by a hint of restraint between them. Caroline did not speak of the flowers, either.

Howard continued to bring flowers, and other gifts. After the first few days the neighbors were mentioning Caroline's visitors to each other. Mrs. Stuart saw Howard's car at the curb before for nearly a week before she spoke of it to Malcolm. And even then she did not tell him of the books and magazines, the baskets of fruit and many boxes he brought.

For a long time she had been troubled about her son and the girl next door. Her intelligence had accepted the fact that however poor the Rutledges might be there was still a difference between their station and Malcolm's. They had family distinction in the past at least, while she couldn't think of an outstanding member of her family or her husband's. Malcolm's father had been a fine man—a good worker and honest, but it might be that Caroline Rutledge would look higher than his son when it came to choosing a husband.

Certainly she knew that Caroline was not encouraging Malcolm. She couldn't understand how Caroline could help loving him and wanting him, unless it were a snobishness she had never shown that was holding her back. They did their best, she admitted—Alva Rutledge and her daughter—to be easy and natural with her. She had been amazed at the change in the mother, but she sensed a subtle difference in her relations with Mrs. Rutledge and the other women in the neighborhood.

She feared that Malcolm was eating his heart out over a hopeless love. She watched him like a hawk, and it was not long after Howard began calling on Caroline that she saw signs of unhappiness in his face.

It was she who first voiced the matter. She did not know Howard's name—she had never been in the Rutledge house when he came and Caroline had not had to introduce her. There were still many ill of the typhoid in South Town and she was unostentatious of her services—she had little time for idle visiting. But she did know that this strange young man whom she took to be her son's rival, was very good looking and apparently wealthy.

"How is she looking," Miss Rutledge asked Malcolm one evening when he returned from seeing Caroline. "I haven't been over there today."

"Better," he said shortly. "H'm, I don't wonder. She's having a lot of company these days. There's some young man comes to see her every afternoon—but maybe she's told you."

"No, she hasn't."

"Mrs. Stuart sighed and shook her head. "I don't think she's the kind to be hiding anything," she remarked.

"Why should she hide anything from me? I'm nothing more than a friend. The place looks like a flower shop," he added crossly.

"Household flowers, and we've a yardful of asters and chrysanthemums," Mrs. Stuart said. "Do you think money makes a lot of difference to her, Malcolm?"

"No," he said loyally. "but it's natural enough that she should have friends with money. You know she cut them all out when she moved here, but being sick—well, it gives this fellow a chance."

"It looks to me like he's making the most of it," Mrs. Stuart averred. "That girl is no trifling Sissey Codden, Malcolm. Probability is, she's as serious about him," she added gently, hating to hurt him but wanting to make certain that he was aware of what might happen.

"Yes," he said dully. "she probably is."

There was silence for a moment, prompted her gesture. Malcolm's fingers tensed in his palms, but he did not touch her.

"I've been a coward," she said miserably. "I've known for days that I'd not go with you this afternoon, Malcolm."

"It's . . . all right," he said stiffly. "Do you remember, you told me you didn't want me to fall in love with you. There was some one else, even then. Well, I'd be a dog in the manger not to hope you've found your happiness at last."

Caroline leaned back against the table on the porch. Her hands grasped its edge. She was trembling violently. Malcolm turned to go.

"Wait," she said, catching her breath sharply. "I want to talk to

"I'd be a dog in the manger not to hope you've found your happiness at last," Malcolm said.

then, "Don't you think you might as well start going to the university again and not wait any longer for her?" Mrs. Stuart asked.

Malcolm said no, but he did not explain that he had lost interest in higher education. Nor that he was waiting with a fearful anxiety for the next day, Saturday, to come, to see if Caroline would save the afternoon for him. They had set that date for a drive into the country. The weather still held gloriously autumnal. It would be a bitter disappointment if Caroline broke the appointment.

Caroline too was thinking of it, dreading to tell him she would not be going. All Saturday morning she worried about it. Shortly after noon she heard him drive his motorcycle into his garage and felt a touch of panic over the nearness of the issue. She must face. For the first time in her life she shrank from seeing a difficult matter through.

Malcolm came over directly after lunch. He looked strangely changed. The lines of his face had lost all boyishness in the sharpened intensified gravity of his expression. He was subdued, and yet more vitally a dominant personality than ever.

It seemed to Caroline that he understood all that she would say to him—had already suffered the shock of it and was prepared to endure it with courage. She was drawn to him with an overwhelming desire to soften the disappointment, to comfort him. Her eyes closed swiftly over the glint of tears that suddenly sprang to them. She put out her hands.

"Malcolm."

He might have taken her in his arms. But her voice had conveyed in its pitying tone the feeling that

AT THE CLIFTONA

Highlighted by the inspired dancing of Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers, and also by the apparent capabilities of this man Astaire to play romantic symphonies on the hearts of feminine fans in a new and whimsical manner, RKO-Radio's sumptuous musical comedy, "The Gay Divorcee," now at the Cliftona Theatre, is the brightest spot this week on Entertainment Lane.

It is, really and truly, one of the first musical comedies to issue from Hollywood boasting a genuinely complete and laughable romantic story—one so complicatedly funny that it cannot be described in detail without detracting from its punch.

Then, there is music by five great composers, ensembles of beautiful girls, that sublime new ballroom joy dance, "The Continental," demonstrated by Astaire and Miss Rogers; fifty daring Adagio dancing couples and many other novelties too numerous to mention.

AT THE GRAND

Harold Lloyd's severest and best picture critic is his own wife, Mildred Davis Lloyd.

Before anyone else ever gets a look at his picture on its first assembly, the comedian always calls in Mrs. Lloyd for an opinion.

The custom was not changed in the instance of "The Cat's Paw," produced by the comedian from Clarence Budington Kelland's novel of the same name, and now playing at the Grand theatre. Mrs. Lloyd's verdict was eagerly awaited by the entire company, inasmuch as the picture is a radical departure from anything the comedian has filmed.

Unforgettable

Whether 29-year-old Rush Holt will be allowed to take his Senate seat next month is still a moot question. But the youthful West Virginian already is having his troubles with job hunters.

He tells this story on himself: Election night he did not retire until nearly dawn. But at last, his friends departed and he turned in. Hardly had he fallen asleep when he was awakened by a vigorous ringing of his door bell. At the door was a stranger.

"Senator," he said, "you may not remember me. But I voted for you and I got friends to vote for me. I'm looking for a Government job, and I thought I'd get my application in early."

"I'll do my best for you," Holt said. "You come and see me when I get to Washington."

"You won't forget," the caller asked. "You'll remember me?"

"Always," Holt replied.

And there was a ring of conviction in his voice which the visitor may not have appreciated.

WHITE STANDS PAT ON HIS DEMAND FOR INCOME TAX

STATE SENATE ACT IN DOUBT

Governor Will Allow Voted Sales Tax To Die On Desk, He Declares.

COLUMBUS, Dec. 10.—Gov. George White stood pat today on his dictum to the Ohio legislature that he will veto the $60,000,000 retail sales tax unless the lawmakers also pass an income tax.

In passing the responsibility for an emergency tax program back to the legislative branch, he stated emphatically and in unmistakable language that "unless I have on my desk a fair and just income tax bill before the expiration of the 10 days allowed me in the consideration of bills, I shall return without my approval the sales tax already adopted."

DOUBT ACTION

"Will the state senate, which overwhelmingly defeated the income tax the lower house passed, reconsider and adopt it?" was the question uppermost in the minds of everyone following the battle between the governor and the legislature.

In the opinion of most observers there was not more than the remotest possibility of an income tax being adopted by the present senate which clearly stated its opposition to such legislation in a decisive 19-to-8 adverse vote on the Ward bill.

Because of previous expressions from members of the senate it was doubtful whether even a quorum would be present on Dec. 12, the date set for sine die adjournment in a joint resolution adopted by both houses.

When the joint resolution was adopted last Friday, it was the intention of both houses to hold only perfunctory sessions next Wednesday, attended by a handful of members, for the purposes of signing the 14 measures to which the presiding officers did not affix their signatures last Friday.

For all practical purposes, the members of the house and senate considered the sessions of the 90th General Assembly at an end when they returned home last Friday. But now the governor is insisting that the senate, at least, return in full strength and pass an income tax.

SENATE STUBBORN

The senate, it has been demonstrated on numerous occasions, can be as stubborn as the governor. Since he has decided that the breakdown in schools and local government will not occur prior to next March 1, it would not be surprising for the senate to at least share that assumption and tell him to veto the sales tax if he so desires.

Passage of an income tax at this late date involves more than ratification by the senate, as difficult as that alone would be. Assuming for the moment that the upper house would agree to an income tax, no one believes it would swallow the 2 to 9 per cent rates contained in the Ward bill the house adopted.

Amendments to the bill in the senate would necessitate concurrence by the House, where the chances of a quorum returning to the capital was even smaller than in the senate.

Pruitt believed in fair mental condition had been permitted the freedom of the hospital grounds but he walked away Sunday morning.

GRAIN PRICES JUMP HIGHER ON CITY MART

Soybean Climb Climaxed By Offer of Dollar Saturday; Other: Up Too.

The climb of prices quoted for grains and other staples on local markets in recent weeks has been of more than passing interest.

The climb was climaxed Saturday by the Raisin-Purina Co. quoting $1 per bushel for soybeans. The company's effort to obtain as many soybeans as possible in an effort to keep its new processing machine busy is attributed to this rise.

Soybeans on Oct. 23 were bringing 90 cents per bushel and on Nov. 29 were receiving the same price. Then started the upward until on Dec. 7 the price offered was 90 cents. Saturday the Raisin-Purina Co. boosted the quotation by 10 cents.

Wheat has seen a steady upswing until Saturday's price offered by the J. E. Schelmer and Sons Co. was 90 cents, two cents higher than a week prior. Wheat on Oct. 23 was 90 cents.

Corn, too, has carried the market far ahead with its price making a steady climb. New yellow corn and new white corn on Oct. 23 brought 61 and 66 cents respectively. The climb started shortly thereafter and Nov. 1 the prices offered were 71 and 77 cents. Nov. 29 they reached 85 and 90 cents.

DAFOE AMAZED BY NEW YORK

Says He Expects Dionne Quintuplets To Be Normal; "Fairy Tale," He Says.

NEW YORK, Dec. 10.—Dr. Alan Roy Dafoe, the timberland physician who ushered the Dionne quintuplets into a surprised world and performed a medical marvel by keeping them alive, is in New York today, seeing for the first time the wonders of a modern metropolis.

"It's a big place," he said. "Just as wonderful as I expected—only more so."

Dr. Dafoe—a small, twinkling, colloquial—peered at the shining towers of the great city with eyes accustomed to the quiet fields and rocky farmland of northern Ontario. His hand that spanned the quivering sisters Dionne into life, busily pumped the hands of celebrities. His ears, used to the smothered silence of a snow-blanketed log country, listened alertly to the urban cacophony of rumbling subway trains and rattling "els" and the chatter of millions.

"TIME OF LIFE"

"I'm having the time of my life," he said. "It's a little unreal, but it's lots of fun."

He smiled, his brown eyes lighted with humor behind gray-rimmed spectacles.

"It is a fairy tale, isn't it? Five babies born up north there—that's amazing. Then, to make it more amazing, they live. And a country doctor that nobody ever heard of—me—becomes famous overnight and gets whisked into all this. No—it doesn't seem real," he declared.

Leaving his "girls," the five dark-eyed babies, for the first time since their birth last May 28, Dr. Dafoe made the journey to "civilization" for a two-fold purpose—to lecture on the birth of the quintuplets and to see, out of the curiosity born of 27 years in the wilderness, what big cities were like.

He left the "quints" well and happy—five plump testimonials to a modern scientific miracle.

They're getting better looking every day, he added—and every day growing more identical.

"You know, I can't always tell them apart myself," he declared. "I may pick up Cecile and she turns out to be Emilie. But they are all handsome babies."

"All five are bright. I am quite sure they will be normal mentally as well as physically when they grow up. They notice everything. When we feed them we sometimes have to put a cloth over their eyes so they won't get frisky and want to play."

Police were also investigating robberies as "artfully planned" by a gang of youths headed by Kennamer. Kennamer, however, has denied participation in any hold-up.

Reports that Kennamer had attempted to end his life by hanging in his jail cell following the phone conversation with Born, were denied by jail officials today.

FINAL REHEARSALS BEGIN FOR COMEDY

Final rehearsals for the home talent play "Crashing Thru," are being held and everything is ready for a big show. The play is to be given at the Grand Opera House on Wednesday and Thursday, and is sponsored by the Royal Neighbors Lodge. "Crashing Thru" is a three act musical comedy with unusual and different situations which makes it one of the best shows of the season.

One of the special features of the third act, which takes place in 1958 is the group of inspectors. These men are from Washington, and must inspect every bride and issue her marriage license. There are more than the one-headed to-day and the subjects of the inspection are numerous. These inspectors arrive in rocket planes under the leadership of their chief, Charles Kirkpatrick. Among the inspectors you will see Harry Steinhilber, Gordon Du-K'e, Reginald Wilson, Harold Dowler, Malcolm Russell, Ernie Weiler and John Neuding.

The costumes are all in the 1958 style and promise plenty of fun. So plan to see the show and enjoy a full evening of fun with the days of the 'gay nineties,' a modern radio station, and the life of the future. Tickets may be secured at the Grand box office beginning Tuesday, or advance sale tickets may be exchanged then at no extra charge.

Edwin L. Daley

A MEMORIAL

"The Captains and the Kings depart."

There has left us another captain and king. In his passing we mourn; but in the triumph of life that was his, we rejoice.

The life of Edwin L. Daley was a triumph primarily because of his utter simplicity. He believed simply; he spoke simply; he lived simply. Of sham and pretense he was a lifelong foe. It was by no means in his appearance only that Lincoln lived again.

It was for this reason that he found comradeship in the flowers and trees, in the rocks and hills. It was where the solitude was broken only by their beauty and ruggedness that he worshipped. To them, as well as in his fellow-men, he glimpsed the eternal.

The story of Mr. Daley is the epic of America. From humble beginnings, through a half-century's leadership in their schools and civic affairs, he rose to a place where a county and city were proud to call him theirs. As a specialist particularly in the field of elementary education he had few peers in his state.

He worked hard. In fact it has long been an open secret that he worked too hard. Yet the many who loved him find solace in the fact that in his closing years he found time for some of the things he had always wished to do; and that honors in abundance came to him particularly in those years from the varied activities with which he had associated himself.

One task, unfinished, he had looked forward to with keen anticipation. This was a retirement next June when he might give his undivided attention to the completion of several text-books for use in the lower grades by those children to whom he was especially attached. But this, perhaps, it has ever been.

Edwin L. Daley was the rugged individualist. In matters of belief and conduct he was dictated to by no man. He believed, simply and with conviction, that which the experiences of his own life permitted him to believe; and he did that only which his conscience and his judgment told him to do. He was not always right; but he was seldom wrong.

It is with pride, therefore that we lay him away. For in him we are reminded of the words of one of his admirers: that life is death, and death life.

MARX LAUDED AS 2-FISTED SOLDIER

COLUMBUS, Dec. 10.—Major Emil F. Marx, of St. Mary's, newly appointed adjutant general of Ohio, is described here as a "forward, two-fisted soldier."

Pointing to Marx's record as a soldier in the World War, and later as National Guard officer and safety director at St. Mary's, Co. E. O. Layton, assistant quartermaster general, declared "Marx will make a good adjutant general."

Lawlor, who served in company "B" of the 146th infantry with Marx during the World War, recalled that Marx, then a first lieutenant, was a "hard and tireless worker."

"He is conservative and straight-forward," Lawlor declared, "and he is not a back-slapper."

Capt. L. S. Ostrander of the U. S. Army, assistant in charge of national guard affairs for the fifth corps area, declared that "Marx has an excellent record as national guard battalion commander." Col. Benson W. Hough, division commander of the guard, said that "Marx's service has equipped him admirably for his new post. He should be familiar with all phases of national guard work, for he has been very active."

In military service almost continuously since 1914, Major Marx enlisted as a private but quickly advanced to first lieutenant. In 1919, after the World War, he became a captain of the National Guard at St. Mary's and in 1921 was made a major.

Under his new appointment, Marx will hold the rank of brigadier general and will handle all the administrative functions of the National Guard.

A World of Cheer in Gifts for All

If other years and other Christmas shopping tours have left you with the feeling that there is nothing new and distinctive to choose for gifts—this year will prove a grand and thrilling surprise! For a journey through the crowded aisles of stores and shops leave you with a feeling that manufacturers have spent real time and thought in contriving gifts that are as charming as they are practical. And if you happen to be shopping on a limited budget—don't be downcast—for never before, it seems, has there been so plentiful a supply of moderately priced yet satisfactory merchandise for Christmas selection.

GIFTS FOR WOMEN

There is real opportunity, this year to give mother, wife, sister or sweetheart, or just the girl friend a gift that will make her breathe a glowing tribute to your taste and thoughtfulness. Indeed, it's almost impossible to go wrong—so lovely and so varied are the household accessories, the toilettries and decorative objects women adore. If she is fond of lovely china and glassware your problem is simple. There are salad and serving plates, for instance, in a lovely creamy pottery in raised, all-over leaf pattern. They have a cool look that adapts them particularly to the salad or dessert course and they are surprisingly low in price.

AN UNUSUAL TABLE SERVICE

Very striking and effective are the new square glass plates of frosted glass with clear edges. To accompany them come goblets and glasses in various sizes also of frosted glass with clear glass stems and square frosted bases. If you wish to choose a complete table setting there are gorgeous candle sticks to match—the tops hung with long crystal prisms.

Ash trays in the same design complete a table setting that every woman who is fond of the original and distinctive will admire.

GIFTS OF TOILET ACCESSORIES

A triple mirror in modern design suggests itself for the woman who is fastidious about her dressing table appointments. Exquisite perfume bottles and atomizers in delicately colored glass with lovely etched patterns are also suggested for the dressing table.

ELECTRICAL GIFTS PROVIDE LEISURE AND EFFICIENCY

If you wish to choose gifts that will provide a real opportunity for the greater enjoyment of life—choose electrical fittings. Any woman will bless you for your thoughtfulness if you give some piece of electrical household equipment that will shorten her tasks and provide hours of extra leisure.

ELECTRICAL KITCHEN EQUIPMENT

Outstanding among electrical equipment for the kitchen are the food mixers. There are many excellent examples—all are efficient and save the maximum amount of time in their operation. Some have many attachments so that the housewife finds almost limitless opportunity for their use. Others,

OUR YESTERDAYS When Morris Invented His Chair, Providing More Comfort to Home

TO HISTORY, William Morris is best known as an artist and poet. To the man and woman who like comfortable home furnishings, he is better known as the inventor of the Morris chair. Morris created his famous living room fixture

less expensive, are more limited in their use but of great value as time savers. Then there are the smart new coffee makers—varied in type, attractive in appearance and inclusive in price range. All of them make coffee that is superior to most made in less efficient utensils.

A mother with a baby will appreciate an electric bottle warmer. Give a heating pad to the friend who is ill or old.

ELECTRIC GIFTS FOR THE TABLE

The popular sandwich toasters make it an easy matter to assemble a quick luncheon or supper. They come in a great many styles and within a moderate price range. The new electric toasters are as good looking as they are efficient. Electric hot plates to keep food warm are an inexpensive and appreciated gift.

GIFTS FOR MEN

Electric razors, cocktail shakers, flashlights, shaving mirrors, desk lamps and radios, are among the most appreciated gifts for men. Indeed, if your gift is electrical it is almost certain to please.

TAKE IT EASY!

Girl Castaway: Good heavens! Cannibals! Sailor: Now, now, don't get in a stew.

GIFTS FOR MEN

If it must be ties, take a tip from the gents. Let the young man who sells them to you really advise you on your selection. Then you'll disprove forever that no woman knows how to pick out a decent tie.

And take this little tip from us. There isn't a man alive who doesn't have visions of pigskin running through his head the night before Christmas. So give the little man a great big gift—a pigskin suitcase or overnight bag. Too much money? Don't despair—there are always pigskin gloves, and he'll love you for them.

What does he like? That depends on your man, but for all of them, they like to be flattered. Does he smoke cigars? Then buy him the most choice kind—he'll believe you think he smokes them all the time! A golfer, is he? Then a new bag for his clubs—and make it the best you can find. Does he entertain a lot? Then some fine, old wines will make a gift that will send a glow through his heart.

Books are a gift worth giving. He'll have them forever—and you can always borrow them! What could be a better idea? Or a subscription to a magazine that you know he'll love. Any every time the magazine arrives, who do you suppose he'll think of? It's justifiable scheming, all the same.

FINE FURNITURE, GIFT FOR HOME

If you are seeking a gift that all the family will enjoy—one that will serve for many years—choose furniture. There are so many "occasional" pieces that fit into the decorative scheme of nearly every home that you will have no difficulty in finding one that will fit your plan of expenditure and the taste of the recipient.

TABLES IN MODERN AND PERIOD STYLES

Few homes have enough small tables—the kind that are so obliging about holding cigarettes, magazines and drinks. Nests of tables in both modern and period styles are certain to be an appreciated gift. If the quest is for something very modern look at the low tables with composition tops that never, never show rings or burns. They have natural wood or metal bases and are stunning and agreeably low in price.

BRIDGE TABLES AND CHAIRS

Nowadays the bridge table has taken on a smart and sophisticated air. The old-fashioned fold-away kind whose legs never seemed to hold up have been supplanted by smart wooden affairs in striking modern design. Many have chairs to match and any bridge playing friend would welcome such a gift. Then, too, there are some stunning magazine racks in Georgian design that are moderately priced and roomy enough to contain a large assortment of periodicals.

Occasional chairs; large roomy leather chairs for dad; a sewing chair for mother. Sewing cabinets, desks, stools and bookcases offer themselves to the seeker after gifts that are practical and attractive. So in your search for satisfactory gifts be sure to include furniture as a very likely solution.

XMAS TABLE DECORATIONS

This year you can make your Christmas table lovely with the many exquisite ornaments designed for its decoration. There are lovely center ornaments of glass fashioned into the shape of poinsettias and mounted on long curved stems that form a decorative base.

Tiny silvery trees to put at each place are hung with crimson holly berries. Sprays of silver leaves to lay down the center of the table. Wee holly wreaths to carry place cards, tiny pots of holly or poinsettia for table favors. Broad ribbons of green or scarlet cellophane ribbon to lay at intervals down the snowy cloth.

Tall Christmas candles in scarlet or white with gold decorations may light the table. Squat candlesticks of painted wood in red or green are designed to support them. There are jolly Christmas favors, pretty nut and bonbon baskets of paper in unusual designs will provide color and Christmas cheer.

Garbo to Go 'Legit'

Greta Garbo

Dispatches from Berlin carry rumors that Greta Garbo, Sweden's gift to the movies, may abandon her Hollywood film career to embark upon the legitimate stage. Friends are quoted as saying Miss Garbo will first "tread the boards" in her native city, Stockholm, afterward returning to America via Broadway.

ABOUT CLOTHES

Maybe you need to be practical. In that case, ask its mother, what the little precious needs most of all. Christmas is one time when that fond parent won't dampen your enthusiasm about giving her youngster gifts. But it's with toys that we're concerned—for after all, that's what youngsters love at Christmas time.

GOOD STAND-BYS FOR BOYS

Of course, you can't go wrong on trains. Big boys and little boys, bad boys and angelic ones, all love trains. And it gives dads a chance to have some fun too. So indulge yourself on trains if you like. They are modern wonders, duplicates of real locomotives. You can spend as much or as little as you like on them. There are some wonders for less than one dollar, and they have a real electric light on the engine. Won't that make eyes bright?

Sleds and skates and bicycles are three more gifts that boys will be sure to appreciate you for.

FOR YOUNG BUILDERS

If he loves to make things, then above all, give him a tool chest. There are those that old everything a boy needs to make simple bits of furniture, ship models and so forth. There's everything included but the lumber, and we suggest that you buy a bit of that to go along if you value your furniture.

FOR LITTLE HOUSEWIVES

If a mother's helper is on your list, we'd suggest as an aid to mother, that you give her one of the little ranges made just for her. Try to get someone else to give her a set of aluminum to go along with your gift—and maybe some china. Then little Susie will have the most sublime faith in Santa Claus. There are heaps of things for these little domestic animals—sets for washing and ironing doll clothes, sewing outfits, and was brooms and carpet sweepers that will teach her to take care of her own room.

FOR WEE ONES

To keep the little ones amused, there are simply magnificent bows, wows and kitty cats—and bay colored blocks, and endless kinds of rubber dolls.

All of which only scratches the surface of the wonders that are waiting to be put into Santa's Christmas pack!

Grandpa Late to Christmas Feast

by Charles Frederick Wadsworth

IT WAS past two when consternation seized the Christmas party at John Henry's. The telegram read:

Have had an accident. Do not wait dinner for me. JAMES S. ESTON.

"Goodness gracious." This from Grandma Eston, who had come on in advance to help Millie. "What do you s'pose has happened?"

John Henry grabbed the telephone and called Balltown. He got Doc Wilkins and asked if he had treated Jim Eston. No, Doc said, he "seen him in the mornin' drivin' around in his car."

Other sources of possible information were tried without success. The gay gathering of kin-folks settled down to apprehensive waiting.

Finally, John Henry said he would drive to Balltown and see what he could learn.

As he was about to leave the driveway for the road, Grandpa's car was seen coming at a dangerous clip. The old man was all smiles as he stopped before the house and alighted.

Grandma, Millie, Jack, Samuel, Mary, Madeline, John Henry and numerous children all asked for an explanation at once.

"This morning," said Grandpa, "I sampled some candy your Grandma had made, and it was so tough I got my upper and lower plates stuck together. I pried, and danged if I didn't pry two jaw teeth out of the plate, on the side I eat on. I simply had to have 'em for that turkey. The dentist said it would take about five hours, as it would have to be vulcanized. But I'm here and okay!"

"And you just did get here by the skin of your teeth, didn't you, Grandpa?" This was from John Henry, Jr.

The party, joyous, entered the house and soon all were settled for the delayed dinner.

Journey From Nazareth, Birth of Christ Child

ALMOST two thousand years ago the great emperor, Caesar Augustus, sent out a decree that the whole world should be enrolled. Each one was to go to his own city: to the place of his fathers. None were exempt from the decree.

From the hill town of Nazareth two people set out in answer to the summons. One, a tall, bearded figure, his shoulders sagging under the weight of years, and from the continued stooping that his trade as a carpenter necessitated. The other, a young and beautiful woman, her face aglow with a strange, sweet serenity. Their names were Joseph and Mary, and they were going to the distant town of Bethlehem, because they were of the house of David.

The man walked patiently beside the plodding donkey on which the woman was seated. They showed no impatience as others passed them by; nor did they join with any of their fellow travelers in venting anger against Caesar for taking them on such a long and tiresome journey.

Perhaps because of Joseph's age, or of Mary's delicate condition, they were among the last to enter Bethlehem, and to seek a shelter at the inn. They were told that there was no room for them there. Their humble appearance made no appeal to the innkeeper on a night when more prosperous looking guests were crowding the doors.

Disappointed and fearful, they sought further. But they could find no place. Some one spoke of a cave outside the town. Joseph looked at Mary and his eyes filled with tears. But she nodded assent. . . . And in that lowly place, warmed only by the breath of oxen, Jesus, the hope and promise of all mankind, was born into the world!—Katherine Edelman.

An Up-to-Date Santa Claus

By Florence Harris Wells

"THERE'S snow stretching as far as we can see in all directions. We've had no possible chance to get out the old car and rattle into town as we planned, and Christmas tomorrow," Tom Lambert looked questioning across their breakfast table at his wife, Lucy. "Do you think we can make the children understand that even Santa Claus couldn't urge his tiny reindeer through such an expanse of snow?"

"I've talked to them about it but their faith is boundless," Lucy's usually cheerful voice had a break in it. "Yet how could we tell that it would snow so long and steadily. But you are better, Tom. We have that to be thankful for."

"Yes, I'm better. Anything is better than being shut up in a stuffy office all day for a man that is used to God's great outdoors. But forget me. It's those three kids I'm worrying about."

It was nearing noon when they heard the whirr of the mail plane over their heads. Mary, Robert and little Tom rushed out to wave greetings.

"Look! Look!" little Tom shouted. "Something's fallen out."

Sure enough, a parachute had been released. Slowly but surely it descended toward the little group.

"It's going down the chimney!" Robert shouted.

But it missed the chimney, hit the edge of the roof and came tumbling down in their midst, a gay umbrella of red and green, with a large white bag securely tied to it. Wired to the bunches of holly and evergreens, that bedecked the outside, was a card.

The children stopped tugging at the fastenings and listened attentively while Tom read:

"My reindeer couldn't navigate in such deep snow; so I'm sending your things by air mail, because the air mail man tells me you are such friendly children you must not be disappointed.—Santa Claus."

"I knew Santa Claus wouldn't forget us!" Rob shouted.

"So did I," Mary and little Tom said in one breath.

Lucy and Tom, Sr., looked at each other.

"Some thoughtful pilot," Tom said soberly.

Perhaps the air waves carried, to the fast disappearing plane, the "Merry Christmas" the little family shouted to their air man Santa Claus.

Sugar toys may be made according to the following directions: 4 pounds of sugar, 2 ounces of corn sirup, 1 pint of water. Boil to 240-242 degrees, then stir until cloudy and pour in plaster of paris molds that have been drained after soaking in cold water for two or three hours.

Christmas Trees

By MARJORIE HAYES
in Boston Herald

NEARLY every one has a Christmas tree nowadays, but if you had been a child in America a hundred years ago the chances are that you might never have seen one. The custom was universal in England many years before it was very common here, except in communities of German or Scandinavian settlers. For it was in Germany that the Christmas tree had its origin. There are several different legends in regard to it. Here is one which dates from the Twelfth century:

An English monk named Winfred who had gone as a missionary into Germany, came upon some priests about to sacrifice the young prince Asulf to the god Thor beneath the "blood oak." He stopped their ceremonies and ordered them to cut down the oak, whereupon a young fir tree appeared in its place which Winfred told them signified the tree of life, or of Christ's living. From that time Germans who became Christians made the fir a part of the Christmas festival, decorating three days in the house, while the fir remains in good condition much longer. There are several ways in which you may distinguish them, first the cones. Those of the spruce hang downward while the cones of the fir are held erect.

The spruce tree is pyramidal in shape, the long cones hanging from the branches near the top. The needles are arranged in spiral rows around the stem, those at the top pointing sharply upward. They have three or four distinctly angled sides. Some common varieties are the red, black, white and Norway spruce.

Fir trees in various sections of the country are the balsam firs which grow abundantly in the mountains and which we find displayed in our markets at Christmas time. The fir is shaped much like the spruce, but the needles are flat and blunt, and usually spread feather-wise from two sides of the stem only. They are dark green above and silvery beneath. The dark purple cones stand erect, glistening with balsam near the top. Balsam also exudes from the trunk, and is used for medicine. The fresh needles are used as a stuffing for sweet-smelling balsam pillows.

Another evergreen sometimes used as a Christmas tree is the hemlock. It is more slender than the spruce, with feathery waving branches which grow very close to the ground. The needles are arranged in two flat rows on the twigs, and have tiny stems. They are soft, and silvery underneath. The cones are tiny, growing at the ends of the twigs. The bark is used in tanning leather. Wreaths made of branches with little cones on them are very lovely.

SUCH TIMES ARE PAST

I was the former Kaiser Wilhelm who once characterized church, cooking and children as the chief ends of woman. At the more modern pole of thought stands Miss Fannie Hurst, not by any means unvoiced. Her particular quarry in the present instance is Herr Hitler, representing basically the same school as his predecessor several times removed.

"Hitler and other individualistic leaders in Europe are pushing half of their population back into the kitchen and deciding how the women of their countries are to live. You hear a lot of patter about women having lost their souls. Hitler and Mussolini seem to think they may have foiled under the kitchen sink."

Thus Miss Hurst, speaking out in meeting, her topic being prevention of war as a threat to all that women hold dear. By no stretch of the imagination can her place be visualized as under a kitchen sink, nor is that the place of many American women who keep abreast of the times. War, since the beginnings of things, has been a male prerogative. One way to discourage it is to curb the distribution of munitions. So women ought to have a say, males of history not having made an especially good job of it.

Let the fair sex tell Messrs. Hitler and Mussolini where they can, if they choose, get off. It may not do much good, but at least they can try. And maybe women in sufficient numbers will be encouraged to come out from under the sink and take their proper place in intelligent society. If the domestic menu loses something in toothsome-ness, what of it? At least a great principle will have been established.

DOUBTFUL CATTA PILOSAE

CATERPILLARS of Harrisburg and its Pennsylvania environs are so bewildered as to be uncertain how to dress. It is related in the news of the day that while some have donned the conventional coat of black, suitable to Wintering-over, others are still wearing their Autumn suitings of a light yellow tint.

This would indicate that Harrisburg caterpillars read the papers. For a regrettable difference seems to exist among our better goosibones. Some seers profess to expect a hard winter while others insist that snow and ice will be, during the season for such things, noticeably lacking in our midst. If weather prophets, among our wisest of citizens, cannot agree on what the immediate future holds out, how can mere caterpillars be expected to know more?

Human beings may, if they can afford such luxuries, have two weights of overcoat, carrying, if need be, one of them on the arm to be ready for any emergency. But caterpillars find it difficult to do so, although Harrisburg may produce a superior brand; at any rate, the latter can at least "make the old one do," as the event proves. Thereby they incur the risk of being too warmly, or too coolly dressed for the day's adventures.

For the sake of our better caterpillars, and equally praiseworthy citizens, let us come to some sort of agreement. Is it going to be a hard winter, or isn't it?

Notwithstanding the jury's verdict, we refuse to contribute even a thin dime toward the purchase of a halo for Mr. Insull.

CAROLINE by RUTH DEWEY GROVES

CHAPTER XXX

Malcolm looked at her in an astonishment that brought a smile to her pale lips—she had forgotten to rouge them.

"You are thinking that I might not be on Edge Street, this winter, aren't you?" she asked him.

"Will you?" he returned, covering his eagerness for her answer with a steepled composure.

"I'm afraid so," she admitted.

"You see, Malcolm—that is what I want to tell you. I haven't found my happiness completely, as you thought. There's an obstacle to it. I must wait until it has been removed. You may be shocked—I am sure you will be. That is why I wanted to tell you myself. The man I love is married."

Malcolm found nothing to say to her. His thoughts were suddenly chaotic. He could not speak, he felt, without blundering.

"I see—you are shocked," she said regretfully. "But don't judge me hastily, Malcolm. There are things about it—well, extenuating circumstances, that make it less shocking than it seems. His wife has no right to him, really. She married him knowing that he did not love her—that he . . . loved me. If she had refused him he'd have come back to me—surely she knew that—but she took him because he had something her father's money could not buy for her—a place in society." She paused. Malcolm waited.

"You see what she is!" she cried defiantly. "A silly little fool! She sold us out—Howard and me and herself too—in a cheap bargain. She hasn't got what she wanted, and we've had to suffer. It isn't fair!"

Malcolm caught at the name. "Howard," he repeated. "Caroline, you don't mean Howard Duns- worth?"

"Yes, I was engaged to him, Malcolm, when father lost his money. We quarreled over our future and he went away. When he came back he was so blue and lonely he didn't care what he did."

Malcolm's mind flashed back to that sultry summer day at the factory, when he had told her of Howard's marriage. He was certain now that he had dealt her a terribly unexpected blow. Anger toward any man who could make her suffer rose sharply within him.

"And you've forgiven him?" he said accusingly.

"You don't understand," Caroline answered gently. "He did not marry to make me unhappy—there is nothing for me to forgive, on his part. And I shan't forgive Gwendolyn, Hoffman, I'm taking him back."

"Didn't she keep to the bargain, whatever it was?"

"It was broken when they made it because it was a lie and she knew it—she made him think she would fill his life so completely that he would forget me," Caroline said in quiet unconcern. "I'm taking him back, thinking only of Gwendolyn's self interest."

"But you said she didn't get what she wanted, either," Malcolm reminded her.

"She wanted to be a society leader, and people wouldn't have her," Caroline explained. "And now that they both know it was a great mistake they . . . I'm giving it up. Don't you think I've a right to him, Malcolm?"

Malcolm answered slowly, deliberately. "There are a lot of things we all have a right to," he said. "That would give us the jitters if we got 'em. I hope you'll be happy, Caroline, but if you are—with Howard Duns-worth—I'll know I've been a darn fool about you."

Caroline was startled, puzzled, and a little angered by what Malcolm had said. "You hope I'll be happy, and if I am you'll be happy, too," she exclaimed. "Well, that looks as if you have a sort of fallen for me against your better judgment."

"I thought you were the finest girl in the world," Malcolm answered unhesitatingly. "But if you can care for that guy you just aren't as fine as I thought, that's all."

"Aren't you being too severe on Howard?" Caroline asked. "You know you're hurting me, but I can't blame you if you have a wrong impression of him. What is so bad about him?"

"I just don't like him. I've seen him and I don't like him and his reasons for marrying another girl sound funny to me. Why didn't he come and ask you to marry him?"

For a moment Caroline, staring at him, thought that perhaps she had been mistaken in him, that he was as crude as his background. Then she saw that his face was white, his lips stiff with pain. He couldn't appreciate fully what he was saying. She forgave him.

"If only I could make you understand," she wailed helplessly. "It was my fault that Howard didn't come back to me. I was terribly unreasonable with him. And then he only married Gwendolyn because he thought he could make her happy. If you say any more against him I'll think you just have middle class prejudices, and you haven't seemed to be that kind of person at all."

"What does it matter what I think?" Malcolm said, flushing. "It matters to me. You know it does. No one in the world has been such a true friend to me as you, Malcolm. Don't let's end it in a quarrel. I'm sorry I said that about—prejudices. You aren't a sophisticated person, and I've been glad you aren't. But this isn't an ordinary, sordid triangle, Malcolm. Howard belongs to me. Gwendolyn is the thief. And if he isn't all that you admire in a man he is still the man I love. I can't believe he could hold me like this if he were as worthless as you think."

"I apologize," Malcolm said miserably. "I think Duns-worth is a laughing snob, but if you love him that puts wings on him."

"Thanks," Caroline said gratefully. "You gave me a bad moment, Malcolm."

"I'm sorry. And I guess nothing could really change my opinion about you, Caroline. But I'm bound to hate the man that gets you. You might have expected that."

"I only wanted you to know the truth," she told him. Malcolm was glad, in the weeks that followed, that he did know it. People in the neighborhood began to gossip. He could see that his mother was worried for Caroline's sake. But he never discussed her affairs. Somehow Howard's name had leaked out and the code of Edge Street said that a married man should not keep company with a single girl.

Mrs. Rutledge withdrew again into the reserve she had formerly shown. Some of the women looked askance at her when they met her in the market. And Mrs. Barnes defended her and Caroline. The others said society doings might be all very well in society but not among people who had something to do besides getting themselves talked about.

Caroline was impatient to the silly glances that were cast at her. She was living in a world of her own—a world wherein her object was to build up and maintain her faith in Howard, to trust him in spite of the doubts that frequently assailed her. For Howard gave her no indication of any progress made toward his freedom.

One day, following a night when her father had attempted with bitter, caustic argument, to make her admit that she was playing a fool's part where Howard was concerned, she was driven to ask Howard a direct question about a point her father had brought up and she had been unable to answer.

"Have you told Gwendolyn?" she asked. "that you want a divorce to marry me?"

This was a question that Howard had anticipated, because he knew that Caroline was no moral weakling. He answered with the lie he'd kept ready.

"Yes, she knows," he said, with a tinge of bitterness, "but it was a mistake to tell her, Caroline. She's jealous of you, and determined to stand in your way."

"But you, Howard?" Caroline cried. "Surely she cannot hold you against your word!"

"If you mean—living there in the cottage," Howard said slowly, "that is only for appearances' sake—to keep Dad out of a hole."

Caroline thought of her own father's ruin—of her mother's sufferings and her own unhappiness—it did not seem just that the man who had helped to bring them to disaster should be protected at further cost to her. Howard, she felt, was putting too much stress on duty, counting material possessions too far above their love.

But she could not say this to him, for suddenly he took her in his arms and kissed her so tenderly and yearningly, pleaded with her so earnestly to be patient, that he succeeded in making her think that she was the selfish one.

"There is nothing between Gwen and me but just the few words we can't avoid," he declared passionately. "We aren't even friendly, Caro. I'd get out in a minute if it weren't that you and I would pay for it. Don't you see, dear, some day I must take you away from this place. I must have money to do that. You know what poverty is—it ought to help you to see that I am right—that I am thinking of you. It was because I loved you so desperately that I lost my head and told Gwen I wanted to marry you—that I am going to marry you. I wanted her to know that you are the only girl I love. It was a mad sort of loyalty to you, Caro darling. You can't let me down because I did that, even though it makes things harder for us."

Caroline, torn between her parents' disapproval, her own misgivings and Howard's pleas, was helpless. But one thing was definitely clear to her—she must return to work. Her mother had had to tell her that their money was gone and they were in debt. Philip had borrowed where, and what little, he could. And Howard had been shown, by the haughty return to him of certain presumptuous gifts which he had brought to the house, that his help would not be accepted.

When she told Howard what she intended to do there was another scene, but she would not be moved to change her mind. Howard agreed at last not to try to thwart her and Caroline was grateful to him. The thought of appealing to Malcolm to find her a place at Purcell's had been repugnant to her. They scarcely ever saw each other. To call him in, perhaps keep alive his hopeless love, only because she needed him and had nothing to give in return was too great an advantage to take of his kindness, she felt.

It had occurred to Howard that factory work might be the very aid he needed. Caroline wouldn't stand up under it for long, he told himself. But if she proved more determined than he thought he could see that her work was roughened a bit. The Rutledges were stubborn in their pride, but he believed there would come a breaking point even for them. Then—a little house somewhere in the country for Philip and Alva—an apartment for Caroline—and Gwen could do as she darned pleased, he assured himself. "One thing he insisted upon—a car of her own for Caroline. He drove it up to the house on the day before she was going back to work and told her that if she did not accept it he would drive it away and never return."

It was a small, inexpensive coupe, and Caroline felt that to refuse it when she needed it so badly would be carrying pride and convention to the point of absurdity. She had planned to use the sedan but she foresaw endless argument with her father on that score. He had said she could go with Malcolm. Caroline had remarked how changed he was since the time he protested against his daughter's riding on a motorcycle and with a factory worker at that.

Mr. Rutledge had retorted that since she'd taken up with Howard Duns-worth anything was good enough for her. Alva had burst in to tears and begged them to stop their quarreling. It had been an ugly scene. Caroline dreaded another like it. She told Howard she'd be glad to have the coupe.

He did not explain to her that he had got it for her because he remembered that she'd told him how she'd got to work before. He felt it was his duty to admit jealousy of a nobody like Malcolm Stuart. Besides that, he considered it the first link in the chain that he hoped would eventually bind her to him. Caught himself in the trap of luxuries provided by another he believed that he could possess Caroline in the same way.

AT THE GRAND

In "The Cat's Paw," now playing at the Grand theatre, Harold Lloyd is not carrying the entire burden of comedy as he has done in the past, but surrounded himself with a great cast, headed by Una Merkel. Included in the support are such sterling performers as George Barbier, who shares a large portion of the acting honors; Nat Pendleton, Grace Bradley, Alan Dinehart, Grant Mitchell, Fred Warren, Warren Hymer, J. Farrell MacDonald, James Donlan, Edwin Maxwell, Frank Sheridan, Fuzzy Knight and Vince Barnett. These veteran performers comprise probably the biggest supporting cast ever to appear in a Harold Lloyd picture.

AT THE CLIFTONA

Two types of love, one of which rises high above carnal intrigue, is represented in the novel domestic triangle in Ann Harding's current starring vehicle, "The Fountain," at the Cliftona Wednesday and Thursday.

Ann Harding is seen as a countess whose natural passion is unlocked by the love of an English aviator. Introduced in Holland while her husband, a German officer, is at the front. When the husband returns home disabled, his spiritual magnificence in accepting the situation wins him the genuine devotion of his wife and his rival. In spite of this deadlock of situations a satisfactory denouement results. Brian Aherne, English screen celebrity, is cast as a former sweetheart to whom the girl surrenders her heart. Paul Lukas, noted for his characterization of Prof. Baer in "Little Woman," plays the husband whose generous philosophy lifts him above mundane sorrow.

John Cromwell directed "The Fountain," which is the screen version of the literary masterpiece written by Charles Morgan. In the cast are Jean Hersholt, Violet Kemble-Cooper, Ralph Forbes, Sara Haden and 20 additional players of importance.

Christmas Gift Buying Simplified This Year

Gift Buying as Well as Getting Is a Real Joy This Christmas.

The air is electric with excitement! Shoppers are beginning to fill the stores. There's a happy, jostling feeling permeating the atmosphere that comes at no other time. Say what you will about Christmas, admit that it's fun to shop! The thrill that comes when you enter a shop with your purse bulging, or your credit up to snuff, ready to buy for Johnny and Sally and Jim, comes at no other time.

PLAN YOUR LIST

But let us warn you. The counters in practically every store in town are such temptresses that it is well to have a fairly clear idea of what you want to buy. Otherwise, we don't guarantee that you will not be lead astray.

But if list planning gets to be a chore, give it up. You'll see just the right thing for every name down there when once you get properly started on one of the most interesting adventures of the year.

KNOW YOUR LIST

One of the easiest ways to plan a gift list is to actually think about the person you are buying for. If everyone would, think how many less things would be tucked away into drawers never to see light of day again or sent into a scrap basket because it would simply be taking up space.

FOR THE FRIVOLOUS

In your young and up-and-coming sister one of those girls who is invited everywhere that's worth going? Then her gift will present almost no problem at all. There are heaps of things that come tumbling along which would throw her into ecstasies.

Think how she yearns for a silver fox muff. Yes, if she knows her fashions, she'll be emphatic about silver fox. She could carry it with her perfectly plain fur coat—or her cloth coat, and be the envy of all her friends. Price appalling? Then leave that for her father to buy. But how about one of the clever compacts that are decidedly new this Christmas. Maybe she has a dozen already, but don't for a minute think that a new one won't thrill her.

Scarves are another easy solution, and one that will make her glad for you. Be sure the scarf is a square one, because she loves to tie them round her neck. Kerchief fashion, and she wears one with practically every sports costume. So even a dozen of them wouldn't be amiss.

No matter how hackneyed a gift might seem to you, if it's something to wear Miss 16 to 21 will be over-joyed. Hosiery, bags, gloves, a trinket for her fingers, neck, ears—these are the things she wants most of all for her Christmas.

NOW FOR HOMEMAKERS
Everyone has someone on their

list that puts her home first. A bride perhaps—an aunt who lives in the country—a friend who has her smart city apartment. All these would love something to make their home more comfortable or decorative.

There are simply sumptuous gifts for bathrooms—bath towel, hand towel, wash cloth, mat and seat cover to match. These are true gifts of luxury that anyone would love. Very often the towel sets come all boxed and ready for your Christmas card.

TABLE LINENS

How grand your gift of this nature depends upon the size of the check you intend to make out. You can find banquet cloths that are the dream of every hostess. And there are some darling breakfast and bridge sets that would be an addition to any linen closet. Don't forget, too, for little gifts, you can give cocktail napkins, fingertip towels, lipstick towels. These cost so little and yet are truly useful and most attractive gifts.

There is no end to the different decorative bits that a home would welcome. Book ends and smoking sets looking decidedly new for this era of moderns. Lamps and little occasional pieces are safe to buy only when you know the home and the tastes of the person to whom you give the gift. This year drinking accessories take their place in the Christmas gift list, and there are so many novelties that it will be the greatest fun to choose.

1,508 OWNERS OF HOMES GIVEN HELP

Loans to the amount of $4,837,503 were disbursed to 1,508 distressed small home owners in Ohio during the week ending December 6th, according to the weekly report of State Manager Henry G. Brunner, of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, given out today.

Of the above amount, $4,275,950 was covered by the Corporation bonds exchanged with former mortgages, and the balance of $561,553 was paid in cash to county treasurers for back taxes, for accrued interest on the bonds, necessary repairs, attorney's fees, and appraiser's fees.

GAY NEW DRESS FOR ANNUAL TREE

Time was when the Christmas tree to be well dressed followed one conservative mode—it was pretty, of course. It had light and color and brilliance—but dare we suggest that in these days it may seem just a trifle old fashioned? Of course Christmas is an old fashioned institution, but if your house or apartment is furnished in modern style you'll have to admit that a modernistic Christmas tree can be extremely effective.

A SILVER TREE

One very gorgeous tree was sprayed all over with silver paint. Long festoons of silvery "snow" were hung from its branches, and silver lights and ornaments were used in profusion. It was as cool and frosty as a pine tree in a snow-laden forest and most effective. Another tree—also silvered was hung with blue lights that gave a moonlight look that was charming.

It is possible to create very striking effects by using lights and ornaments in one color or in two boldly contrasting tones. One tree we saw was really not a tree at all but a structure of silver painted wood, very simple and modern in its lines. The lights were set on the "branches" at cleverly placed intervals and the effect was as "up-to-the-minute" as the most advanced modern could wish.

A very lovely tree that used all the old-time ideas in ornament with modern improvements was extremely decorative and beautiful. Long strands of popcorn were dipped in gilt paint and festooned on the tree. Gingerbread men were hung from the branches by scarlet ribbons. The most unusual and amusing ornaments were chosen, and the whole lighted with varicolored lights set in reflectors to match.

WHEAT PRICES ARE GOVERNED BY COUNTRIES

Importing Nations Encourage Home Production; Others Aid Exports.

A dozen countries, both importers and exporters, now have regulations governing wheat and wheat prices. Importing countries have raised tariffs against imports of wheat to encourage home production of the crop, and exporting countries are attempting by various means to expand export outlets in order to retain or regain export trade.

Canada attempts to regulate supplies through marketing controls. Each province enacts its own legislation to this end. A control board is set up by some of the provinces, which has absolute control over wheat sales. Control legislation does not apply until the wheat crop exceeds a certain amount.

In Argentina a basic price is set for wheat which is now the equivalent of 63 cents a bushel. If at any time the price of wheat falls below this, an agrarian board buys wheat and sells abroad at current market prices. The government stands the loss in these transactions. Also, the Argentine government advances liberal loans on wheat for short terms periods.

In Australia the government gives direct assistance to wheat growers. About $12,000,000 is distributed to growers on an acreage basis. Payments amount to about 7 cents a bushel. The government has set aside $16,000,000 to provide a bounty sufficient to maintain a 60-cent price for wheat at point of export. This bounty has not been needed, as yet, because the price at Sydney is about 70 cents. Funds for the payments are derived from sales taxes on flour amounting to $17 a ton, from state revenues and from an excise tax on flour.

In Chile an agricultural export board buys wheat from producers at $1.04 a bushel when there is a surplus for export. The home market is protected by a tariff. When the world market rises to $1.91 a bushel, wheat may come into Chile duty free.

In Germany, a deficit country in wheat production, the tariff on imports of wheat is $1.62 a bushel. All imports are handled through a government office. If anyone wishes to port wheat through ordinary trade channels, the tariff is $3.86 a bushel. All exports of wheat are prohibited. Prices are fixed. In the Berlin district, this price is equivalent to $2.14 a bushel.

USE REQUIRED

Until recently, German millers were required to use 97 per cent home-produced wheat in their flour. A current shortage caused the government to lower this percentage temporarily to 80 per cent.

Sweden has eliminated imports for flour purposes by requiring millers to use 100 per cent domestic wheat in flour. Since the growers have been guaranteed a price of $1.39 a bushel.

The United Kingdom grants tariff preferences to certain countries. A production subsidy is given home growers guaranteeing a minimum price of $1.70 a bushel. The estimated market price this year is 77 cents a bushel, so that a tax of $1 is placed upon each pound sack of flour to finance the subsidy.

France fixed the price of wheat at the mills at $2 a bushel. Acreage is allotted to French farmers. Each farmer who sows wheat in excess of his average acreage for the past 3 years is fined $13.50 per acre of excess.

France recently entered the wheat export market. She pays a bounty of $1.63 a bushel on exports. French farmers also produce wheat behind a tariff wall. The minimum duty is 85 cents, the maximum $1.71.

Cholera Is Spread by "Carriers"

Difficult to Detect, They Present a Constant Menace

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States senator from New York
Former Commissioner of Health,
New York City

LIKE TYPHOID fever, yellow fever and smallpox, at one time cholera was feared by those living everywhere. Though originally a disease of the tropics it was carried to all parts of the world because of the faulty maritime regulations and careless quarantine.

Although cholera still appears in parts of Asia and South America, with occasional outbreaks in the Philippine islands, the numbers of cases and deaths are much smaller than they were a few decades ago. Though the disease has not recently appeared in continental United States, we must not disregard its appearance in neighboring countries and every effort must be made to prevent its occurrence. When cholera occurs it can always be traced to poor enforcement of hygienic laws or improper control of epidemics.

Dr. Copeland

Germ Carriers

One of the important duties of the United States public health service is the prevention of the introduction and spread of infectious diseases from foreign countries.

Cholera is caused by a germ called the "spirillum cholera". This germ is also known as the "comma bacillus", because under the microscope it closely resembles the punctuation mark, the comma. The germ is found in contaminated food and water and is quickly spread by faulty sewerage and other sanitary defects. The germ is transmitted to man by soiled fingers, food, flies and contaminated clothes.

Until the germs of cholera can be completely eradicated, the disease will continue as a menace to civilization. Like many other communicable diseases, cholera is spread from one section of the world to other parts by the so-called "carriers". The carrier is a person who carries the germs of cholera without being aware of it. He presents no outward complaint yet harbors the germs of the disease. Unfortunately, it is difficult to detect cholera carriers.

The detection of all persons who harbor the germs of cholera would be a gigantic task. But it is probable that this will be accomplished at some future date.

Our increasing insistence on clean shops, the proper care of foodstuffs and the cleanliness of food handlers have accomplished wonders. We escape many ailments that menaced our fathers.

Doom of Mississippi Packets

Steamboating on the Mississippi received its first setback in the general disruption of ordinary business caused by the Civil war. And it was just beginning to recover when more sinister opposition appeared in railroad competition, and as the steamboats supplanted the old hand-propelled broadhorns and keel-boats of an earlier time, so the speedier railroads gradually took away all through river traffic and the great Mississippi packets were a thing of the past.

Favorites From Afar

The greatest fault of foreign recipes which we examine with thoughts of preparing in this country, is that too many times the ingredients are not available. In some countries where black bread is common, white bread made from wheat flour is quite a delicacy. That is due to the fact that these are not wheat growing countries, and imported grains are more expensive.

Canned fruits are considered a luxurious extravagance in Sweden we are told, while to us a canned fruit dessert is a commonplace serving. Here is a Swedish favorite—fruit pudding. It is served with afternoon coffee.

Swedish Fruit Pudding

Stew dried apricots and prunes until tender, without adding any sugar while cooking. Place a layer of fruit in a serving bowl, then a layer about 1/2 inch thick of toasted bread crumbs that have been buttered and sweetened. Then add another layer of fruit, then crumbs, then fruit, until the top of the bowl is reached, or the desired quantity of pudding is made.

Pojharsky Kolety

A Russian meat serving made with veal or chicken has an unusual taste. Use:

- 1/4 loaf of white bread
- 1/2 C. milk
- 1 pound of veal, chopped
- 1 onion, chopped fine
- 1/2 C. hot melted butter
- 2 eggs
- 2 Tbsp. water
- Bread crumbs
- Salt and pepper

Cut off the crust from the bread and soak it in milk. Squeeze almost dry and mix with the chopped veal. Add onion browned in 2 Tbsp. of the butter, and add salt and pepper to taste. Beat one egg, and add to the mixture with the water. Mix well. Make into oblong rolls. Beat the other egg. Dip the rolls into this, then into the bread crumbs, and fry them in the remaining butter.

Sauer Milch Pfannkuchen (Sour Milk Pancakes)

1 C. flour 1 egg, well beaten
1/2 tsp. salt Sour milk
1 tsp. baking powder

Sift the dry ingredients together. Add the egg and enough sour milk to make a batter the consistency of very heavy cream. Heat the fat a quarter inch deep in a frying pan. Drop spoonfuls of batter into the pan and let them form small cakes. Fry until a golden brown on each side. Serve immediately with tart jelly or apple sauce over them.

Chinese Chop Suey

- 1/2 C. onions
- 3 Tbsp. fat
- 1/2 tsp. salt
- 1/4 tsp. pepper
- 1/2 C. celery, chopped
- 2 C. cooked fresh ham, diced
- 3 C. thickened meat stock
- 1/2 C. water
- 1 can Chinese bean sprouts
- 1 tsp. brown sugar
- 2 tsp. soy sauce

Saute the onions in the fat. Add the salt, pepper, celery and meat which have already been cooked, the meat stock which has been thickened with 1 Tbsp. of flour to 1 C. stock, and the water. Cook slowly for about 30 minutes. Then add the Chinese sprouts, drained, and brown sugar to the mixture. Heat thoroughly before serving with soy sauce.

Edison Disliked Decorations

Upon Thomas Edison's second trip to Europe the French Telephone company offered him a decoration which required that he wear a long sash. But the Ohioan flatly refused with the assertion that he couldn't "stand for that." Persuaded by his wife, he did however consent to wear the little red button of the Legion of Honor. But whenever he saw any American approaching he would slip the button into his pocket for fear, as he said, "they might think I am trying to show off."

LITTLE ORPHAN MARY'S CHRISTMAS

BY HELEN GAISFORD

"SIGHED Mrs. Bonner, 'we have a hundred dollars. Oh, well.' And she tucked the money away in her blouse."

Mrs. Bonner read snatches of the letter. "And so," it finished, "as we shall be well on our way by Christmas, we are sending you two hundred dollars. I do hope you will get something you really want. We thought of the usual presents, but it seems you have them all and we get down so seldom nowadays that I have no idea what may be in your mind. Remember, now, no saving this. Spend it by Christmas for whatever will make you most happy. Bob sends his regards to you both. Your loving daughter, Bess."

"Why, Mother, you're crying." "No—no, I'm not, John. I'm too old to act like a baby. Only I had so hoped—"

"I know, I had, too. It would have been nice to have had Bess back again for Christmas, and a tree, and dinner—and well, folks around laughing. You know what I mean." "It just doesn't seem like Christmas any more. Remember when Bess was a baby? Her first doll, and that year she got the cowgirl suit! She cried and cried because she had thought it would have trousers instead of a skirt. I declare, there isn't anything I wouldn't give to have a little girl again—just for Christmas time."

"How nice it would be," she mused. "Maybe we could borrow one from the orphan asylum—"

"And buy her clothes—"

"And a doll—"

Up went the holly and up went the tree. A wreath hung in the window; a plum pudding hung in the pot. Mr. Bonner strung the lights and Mrs. Bonner trimmed the tree—for little Orphan Mary was to arrive that afternoon.

Before things were half ready, she came—a shy little girl, with big, round eyes and soft yellow hair. Her severe little dress was a trifle short, her hat a bit too old, her coat very plain.

The woman from the orphanage made the necessary introductions, wiped Mary's nose, stuck the handkerchief in her pocket and cautioned her to "be a good girl." And then she was gone, and a scared little girl was trying very hard not to cry.

"Do come in and get your things off, Mary," said Mrs. Bonner. "We have a lovely tree, but you're not to look at it until after dark. I thought this afternoon you could help me make cookies. Would you like that?"

"O-oh," said Mary. "I'd love it!"

Somehow this lady made her feel all warm, and not a bit afraid. "I know how to make cornmeal mush all alone," she volunteered.

"How nice! We must have some while you're here—or maybe you'd enjoy something else more," Mrs. Bonner added as an afterthought. "We're going to have turkey Christmas. Do you like turkey, Mary?"

"I guess so, I never had any. We have rooster for Christmas at the Home."

"Now before we make the cookies," Mrs. Bonner directed, "you must first wash your hands. Wait, I'll get you a towel."

"Oh!" Mary exclaimed, when the drawer was opened. "What gorgeous rags!"

"Those are silk pieces. I was going to make a pillow top, but then when we found out you were coming, I stuck them in there. Some of those pieces belonged to my wedding dress, and I wouldn't have anything happen to them for the world." She closed the drawer and helped Mary dry her hands.

That night when Mary had been tucked away in Bess' old room, the kind-hearted couple sat for a long time in front of the fireplace.

"I am so glad we could get her for a few days before Christmas," Mr. Bonner remarked. "How her eyes popped when she saw the tree! And when we told her that on Christmas morning there would be presents under it for her, it seemed too wonderful for her to believe."

"Yet I noticed a wistfulness in her eyes," his wife answered, "as though something was keeping her from being completely happy."

"She still feels a little strange, perhaps. It will pass."

"I hope so. I almost wish she could stay always. It will be hard to give her up when the time comes."

Mrs. Bonner was surprised to find, next morning, that Mary had closed and locked her door. She answered her knock, however, and appeared promptly for breakfast, apparently perfectly happy. Yet Mrs. Bonner was worried to notice that whenever Mary had an opportunity, she would slip away to her room, lock the door, and stay there until she was called.

They spent one day in town shopping, and on the next made all preparations for Christmas dinner. On Christmas eve they went to church, and heard the old familiar carols. And then Orphan Mary went to bed in high excitement, and Mr. and Mrs. Bonner piled the gifts around the tree.

Christmas morning brought a snowstorm and dark skies. Mrs. Bonner slept lightly, and at the first sound of Mary stirring she got up. A few minutes later she came back to her husband. "John, what did you do with my silk pieces?"

"Why, I haven't seen them, Mother."

"Well, they're gone. Do you suppose—?" Mary!

"Well, they're gone. Do you suppose—?" Mary!

Mrs. Bonner peeked around a corner of the parlor curtain as they went. Then she turned and looked at the tree. The presents were in a heap at the foot, but the tinsel was now a mockery. She sank down on a stool and idly counted them over.

And then she noticed one that had not been there last night. It was a little back from the others, and more crudely wrapped. She opened it, and there was a pillow, all made from the quilt pieces. She ran to the window, but the car was quite out of sight.

"Oh," cried Mrs. Bonner, "that poor child! She couldn't stand not having a present to give in return, and so she made for me the one thing I said I wanted." She hugged the pillow close, and her tears spotted one of the best pieces. After a while she heard the car drive into the garage, and her husband's step on the porch. She ran to meet him.

"Look, John! Look what Mary made for me. And I called her a thief! Can't we get her back? She counted so much on this Christmas, and now I've spoiled it all!"

"I wouldn't say that quite, Mother. It can still be the happiest Christmas ever."

"What do you mean?"

"Well, you see, when we got to the orphanage I didn't have the heart to let her go. So instead I went in and asked them for adoption papers. If you want to, we can just sign these up and keep her always."

"Then, where's Mary?"

"Why, she's out in the garage," Mrs. Bonner threw her arms around his neck. "Oh, John, you darling! What a glorious Christmas!"

And they went out together for little Orphan Mary.

"Yes'm, Merry Christmas!" Mary came out into the hall. "Merry Christmas, Mr. Bonner."

"The same to you, dear. Mary, do you know what became of my silk pieces?"

"Why, yes'm, I—"

"You what?"

"I'd lots rather you didn't ask me, Mrs. Bonner," she said appealingly. "Please!"

"My lovely silk pieces, and you take them without saying a word! You know that's stealing, don't you?" Mary nodded and began to cry. "And yet you took them, Mary?"

"Yes'm."

"Well, that settles it. There's one thing I won't have around, and that's a thief. Get dressed, both of you. John will drive you back."

"Now, mother—"

"Do you want a thief around? No telling what she might take next. Get your things, Mary. Hurry!"

Orphan Mary turned quickly and did as she was told. By the time John had the engine warmed up she climbed in silently beside him and they started off.

Mrs. Bonner peeked around a corner of the parlor curtain as they went. Then she turned and looked at the tree. The presents were in a heap at the foot, but the tinsel was now a mockery. She sank down on a stool and idly counted them over.

Attorney General Seeks Sustained Cooperation of Public In War On Crime

WASHINGTON -- Behind
the Crime Conference opening here today is some basic, homespun philosophy by its chief inspirator, Homer Cummings.

Not long after he became Attorney General, Cummings decided that all the sleuths at his command could not cure crime unless he had the cooperation of the American public, as long as the movies were indirectly extolling the criminal and the flapper glorifying him.

So he set out to make the public crime conscious.

This week's conference is not intended as a halcyon movement, as a sporadic, sudden drive against crime. What Cummings is planning is a long-sustained campaign that will grow in volume.

To this end delegates convening today are not merely crime experts, lawyers, representatives of prison associations, etc., but also representatives of women's clubs, the press, radio, the motion picture industry and from a broad sociological field.

The plan is to put the problem before the public and keep it there, rather than the usual reverse of the people putting the problem up to the Government.

Penal Court to Handle

EXPULSION STOPPED

Rumanian Leader in Frantic Peace Plea

By International News Service

In an effort to solve the grave dispute between Yugoslavia and Hungary over the assassination of King Alexander, France has drafted a proposal for creation of an international penal court to handle terrorism cases.

The proposal, falling far short of Yugoslavia's demands for satisfaction, was drafted while powers met at Geneva in a tense atmosphere and struggled to find a path out of the maze of international difficulties.

This and other efforts by the big powers to effect a peaceful solution resulted directly from the disconcerting revelation that Yugoslavia is resolved to seek satisfaction independently of the league of nations fails to pin responsibility for the assassination on Hungary.

Meanwhile, the Yugoslav government ordered immediate cessation of expulsion of Hungarians.
Watchers at the border reported only 24 emigres crossed yesterday.

Dr. Edouard Benes Czechoslovakia's foreign minister, Dr. Edouard Benes, left, warned the League of Nations council at Geneva that the Little Entente (Czechoslovakia, Rumania and Yugoslavia) would declare war on any nation that attempted to break up that alliance. Meanwhile Admiral Nicholas Horthy, regent-dictator of Hungary, faced a crisis as Yugoslav soldiers were reported crossing the frontier after the expulsion of thousands of Hungarians from Yugoslavia.

TULSA, Okla., Dec. 10.—Homer

a week for questioning in the John P. Gorrell, Jr., murder case, was surrendered today by his

The father, head of the H. F.

son immediately were closeted with Police and Assistant County Prosecutor Thomas Gilmer.

TULSA, Okla., Dec. 10.—The mystery surrounding the slaying of John Gorrell, Jr., socially prominent Tulsa youth, deepened today as police investigated the death of Sidney Born, Jr.

Born, who was 19, the son of a University of Tulsa professor, was found with two bullet wounds in his head a few blocks from the spot where the body of Gorrell was found Thanksgiving night.

The youth died in a hospital last night. Though detective sergeants declared the youth had committed suicide, authorities today investigated the possibility the boy had been murdered.

Born drove Phil Kennamer, son of a federal judge, who is being held for the slaying of Gorrell, to meet Gorrell the night Gorrell was killed. According to police, Kennamer has confessed shooting Gorrell, claiming he killed his friend in self-defense.

CRIME REMEDIES

Ever since the Justice Department announced its plans for a crime conference it has been devoted with almost as many suggestions on how to eradicate crime as Franklin Roosevelt gets on how to end depression.

One of them urged the registration of all laundry tags. Another urged the segregation of all undisciplined children into concentration camps where they would not be allowed to reproduce.

But the prize "nut" letter attributed crime to the United States Navy and the bad example set by sailors while on shore leave.

So far, Attorney General Cummings has refrained from showing this letter to his colleague the Secretary of the Navy but the temptation is rather great.

Santa Claus Worrying About Circleville's Many Fine Children

Old Saint Nick, in other words
Santa Claus, is beginning to wander if Circleville and Pickaway-co children do not want any toys for Christmas.

A week ago Santa Claus informed
The Herald through one of his gnomes that he would try to accommodate all who had letters published. Only a few children have written to Santa Claus but his gnome, who happened here again this morning checking up, some kiddies on whom Santa Claus had reports, said that there still is plenty of time but that letters should be sent in this week since the time is growing short.

Incidentally the firemen need many more toys before they will be able to take care of the many needy children of the city. They have a good supply of material on hand but children who have discarded playthings have been slow about bringing them in. If you have toys and will call the fire department someone will be glad to call for them; that is if you are unable to deliver them yourself.

GREATER FARM INCOMES SEEN BY PRESIDENT

Three Conditions Remain to be Fulfilled, Roosevelt Declares

Production Certain

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10.—
President Roosevelt told the American Farm Bureau federation at Nashville, Tenn., today over long distance telephone that he hoped an even larger farm income increase in 1935 than the thousand million dollar 1934 increase over the 1933 farm income.

The president, who spoke into a telephone at his White House desk, warned the convention, however, that the hope for an increase next year can be realized only if the American people fulfill three conditions.

SEES 3 CONDITIONS

The three conditions necessary to increased farm income next year, as the president sees the national economic picture, are:

1. Increased industrial production to expand the market for farm products.
2. An increase in imports to pay for a larger portion of America's export trade.
3. Continued adjustment of agricultural production to fit an existing market.

Mr. Roosevelt, in voicing the brief greeting to the farm bureau federation, called attention to the fact that this year's increase in farm income came in spite of the worst drought on record. Such an increase in the face of unavoidable obstacles, the president characterized as a significant accomplishment.

URGES SUPPORT

After outlining the three conditions necessary to an improvement next year, the President concluded his greeting:

"To fulfill these three requirements, I ask a continuation of the splendid support you have so unselfishly given in the past."

Miner Entrapped by Slide Cries, "Father! I am Dying"

GREYSTONES, Wicklow, Irish Free State, Dec. 10.—"Father! I am dying."

This anguished cry from beneath a rock slide in the Wicklow mountains this afternoon caused rescue workers to lower a priest to the spot where Charles O'Leary was trapped and administer the last sacraments.

O'Leary was caught in a rock-slide in a deep well. Rescuers hewed frantically at the rocks over the week-end and reached within a foot of him when new falls of sand necessitated temporary abandonment of their efforts.

The entire country waited to hear the result of the heroic rescue attempts and praised O'Leary's stoic courage. He failed in an attempt to amputate his own leg without an anaesthetic.

CLARKSBURG POSTMASTER BADLY HURT

Frank W. Campbell Struck By New Holland Man's Car Skidding In Snow.

Slippery, ice-sheathed streets and roads began today claiming their winter traffic toll of lives and victims while city and state officials reiterated their warnings for the utmost care on the part of motorists and pedestrians.

The only serious accident reported in this vicinity occurred in Clarksburg where Frank W.
Campbell, 51, postmaster for the past ten years, suffered a fractur-

Death Probed

Landon C. Bell, Jr.

An extensive search made for Landon C. Bell, Jr., above, a Hampden-Sydney, Va., institute student, of Columbus, O., resulted in his body being found in a Pennsylvania coal mine.
Bell was the son of a prominent lumber company official.

Harold Manbeavers, 16 year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Doyle Manbeavers of Water-st., sufed skull and serious body injuries in an accident at midnight Sunday when he stepped into the path of the automobile driven by Homer Leaverton of New Holland.

Leaverton said he tried to avoid the accident but skidded on snow.

REPORTED CRITICAL

Campbell was taken to the Chillicothe hospital where he was reported in critical condition.

Weather forecasters today predicted that the low winter temperatures would remain in the state "for several days" yet.

The lowest temperature recorded in Columbus Sunday was seven degrees above zero at 8 a. m.
Later in the day the mercury climbed to 26 degrees.

Cleveland experienced what was said to have been the heaviest snowstorm in eight years yesterday. A total of eleven inches of snow fell there. Cincinnati also was blanketed with snow which came in the wake of sub-freezing temperatures. Additional snow flurries were predicted today.

The snowfall throughout the state brought employment to hundreds of persons to clear traffic

LINERS RUSH TO STEAMER

Three Vessels Stand By Janese Ship In Distress in Atlantic

NEW YORK, Dec. 10.—Three of the six ocean liners rushing through the night to the aid of the Japanese freighter Victoria Maru, stricken helpless in a mid-Atlantic storm, were reported alongside the vessel early today.

Mackay Radio reported the rescue ships are the Dutch steamer Amsterdam, the "Pacific Trader," and the "Karl Casen."

Due to heavy seas the rescue ships were unable to remove any of the Victoria's crew of 40, all Japanese.

The first message picked up from the crippled freighter at 5:40 p. m. yesterday said her captain and chief officer were dead and third officer had been washed overboard.

NEW YORK, Dec. 10.—With the lives of her chief officers snuffed out, seven sailors injured and her bridge and rudder swept away by giant waves, the Japanese freighter Victoria Maru was wallowing helplessly in mid-Atlantic today as a trans-Atlantic liner and several freighters sped to her rescue in response to SOS calls.

The first message from the crippled freighter, picked up at 5:40
p. m. yesterday, reported her captain and chief officer dead and her third officer believed washed overboard during a storm. She reported she was compelled to use her engines for steering.

The message gave the freight-er's position as 484 miles directly north of the Azores and 900 miles west by north of Spain.

FORD TO EXPAND

DETROIT, Dec. 10.—Henry Ford today announced further expenditures of $8,000,000 to improve the steel-making and foundry facilities of the Rouge plant.

Three months ago Ford decided to manufacture his own steel, and announced a construction program for two steel mills and their necessary power equipment.

Today's announcement said that $2,000,000 has already been spent on this project. The $8,000,000 program revealed today brings Ford's total expenditure for new equipment within ten months to approximately $20,000,000.

KIWANIS TO HEAR OF RIVER PROJECT

James I. Smith, Jr., will speak before the Kiwanis club at 8:30
p. m. today at Hanley's tearoom on the proposed Scioto-Sandusky water conservation and flood control program. Mr. Smith has developed into many of the details of the program, its benefits to Pickawayco and its cost and has a splendid talk prepared.

WOOD OF KIDNAP LADDER FOUND IN HAUPTMANN'S HOME

NEW YORK, Dec. 10.— Disclosure that a piece of wood from the Lindbergh kidnap ladder had been traced to the Bronx home of Bruno Richard Hauptmann today threw new light on the nature of evidence to be introduced at the murder suspect's trial.

It was learned authoritatively that one of the pieces of wood used to strengthen the ladder had been found to fit perfectly into the space where a strip had been taken from the attic floor of the Hauptmann home.

C. A. C. CAGE TEAM FORMED

Judy Gordon Handles Reins of Organization With Steele, Merriman, Parks, Purcell, Hegele and Barnes Called to Practice; Play Christmas.

The Circleville Athletic Club basketball team will again take the hardwood this winter with the first game to be played Christmas night if a suitable opponent can be found.

It is possible Bliss college will be the foe but negotiations have not yet been completed. Judy Gordon will run the team having gained permission from the Athletic club officials.

SEVEN ON TEAM
On the squad will probably be Gordon, Art Steele, Eve Merriman, Boyce Parks, Carl Purcell, Joe Barnes and Bill Hegele. This outfit worked together nicely last year and with Purcell and Hegele each adding a year to their experience they should prove real assets to the CAC outfit. Tubby Vlerbone will play when he is home.

Home games will be played every week under the plan—but as yet nothing has been done about a schedule. Out-of-town games will also be sought.

Whether an independent league could be organized to play in preliminary games prior to the club games is not certain but a number of cage enthusiasts have been mentioning trying to organize such a league.

Announcement that a club will support a team is greeted with enthusiasm by local sports enthusiasts.

HIGH PLAY TWO
The high school cage team will meet two worthy opponents this week, Columbus Academy, which team holds a victory over Columbus East, coming here Friday evening for a game at the C. A. C. and Groveport being met on the Franklin-co court Saturday night.

The showing of the high school pleased many of its followers last week but a hard week of practice is promised by Coach Herberholz in preparation for the Academy contest.

County games this week include: Scioto at Walnut; Darby at New Holland; Perry at Pickaway; Jackson at Decree; Washington at Monroe; Salt Creek at Ashville.

OLIN DUTRA LEADS

MIAMI, Fla., Dec. 10.—Two shots out in front after a par-busting first round of 70, the only under-par achievement the Miami Biltmore $12,500 open field of 303 entries could boast in two days of divot-digging, Olin Dutra, the national open champion, who forsook his native California to head the home club pro staff, has entrenched himself as favorite to win the $2,500 first prize.

The burly Monterey expert rests today while the battalion of 246 players which was drum-major by Leonard Schmutte's first round 72 on Saturday returns to the wars for its second round. Due to its record size, the field has been staggered and Dutra is due to open second round operations tomorrow.

About This And That

COLLIER'S THIS WEEK

The final All-American football team, and there have been plenty of them, will be announced this week when Collier's is placed on sale at the newsstands—There are just two teams that receive national recognition, Collier's selected by Grantland Rice, and that of the All-American football board of coaches headed by Glenn S. Warner, Elmer Layden, Edward L. Casey, Christy Walsh and Howard H. Jones.

BORRIES FAVORED

Just who will be on the Collier's team is a matter for conjecture, but you can bet the East won't be completely ignored as it was on the All-American board—Pittsburgh where Charlie Hartwig was selected for a guard position was as far east as that traveled, and that was about far enough.

GIANTS WHIP BEARS, 30-13

NEW YORK, Dec. 10.—That upset can occur even in professional football was proved Sunday when the New York Giants led by invincible Ken Strong scored for touchdown in the final period, 13-13, in an amazing game as has ever

although Buzz Borries of the Navy should rate a place if anyone on the Atlantic seaboard does—He was a star.

MIDWEST IN LEAD
The team named by the All-American board included: Moscrip of Stanford and Hutson of Alabama, ends; Maddox of Kansas State and Barclay of North Carolina, tackles; Monahan of Ohio State and Hartwig of Pitt guards; Robinson of Notre Dame, center; Berwanger of Chicago and Lund of Minnesota, halfbacks, and Grayson of Stanford, fullback.

STATE SURPRISES

been seen here. With the victory vent the world's championship and $621 for each player. Each Bear received $414. Net receipts of the day were $94,504.

The Bears enjoyed what seemed to be a comfortable 13-13 lead in the third period after a touchdown by Nagurski and two field goals by Jack Manders. Strong's field goal in the first period was the initial Giant score.

The third period ended 13-13 but the Giants pulled every trick they knew from the bag, took advantage of several clear-cut breaks and went on to victory. There was no stopping the running and passing attack of the goalmates.

In this final period Strong scored twice, once on a 42-yard run, Frankland took a pass to tally and Danowski also crossed the goal. The Bears were helpless.

The defeat was the first taken by the Bears since the 1933 season when the Giants beat them 3-0 on a Ken Strong field goal.

The Brooklyn Dodgers and St. Louis Gunners played in another thriller at St. Louis with Brooklyn winning 17-14 on a field goal by Ralph Kercheval, former University of Kentucky star.

MANILA, P. I., Dec. 10.—Babe Ruth and his barnstorming big leaguers, defeated the Filipino Olympic baseball team 7 to 3 in a hard fought game before 22,000 spectators here today.

Ruth failed to get a hit, was struck out once, but Earl Averill made two homers and Charley Gehring chalked up one.

GREAT QUARTERBACKS COME HOME

Returning to their home town, Marietta, O., for Thanksgiving dinner, three quarterbacks of great university football teams become just young men about town again. Left to right John "Kats" Kadlic, Princeton; Miller Munjas, University of Pittsburgh; and Raymond "Bud" Bonar, Notre Dame. All three played together on the Bellare high school team several years ago.

This two-piece afternoon dress—simple enough to wear to work and at the same time dressy enough to wear for a dinner engagement after working hours—is a clever answer to a busy woman's wardrobe problems. The sleeves, cut in one with the sides of the bodice, give a soft fullness to the blouse—the front panel drapes slightly at the throat and buttons over the left shoulder—and the skirt is fringed by a trim panel which carries out the bodice lines and breaks into kick pleats at the knees. And notice the deep triangular yoke which supplies chic "back interest!" Contrast may be used as shown, but you will find all one color equally smart.

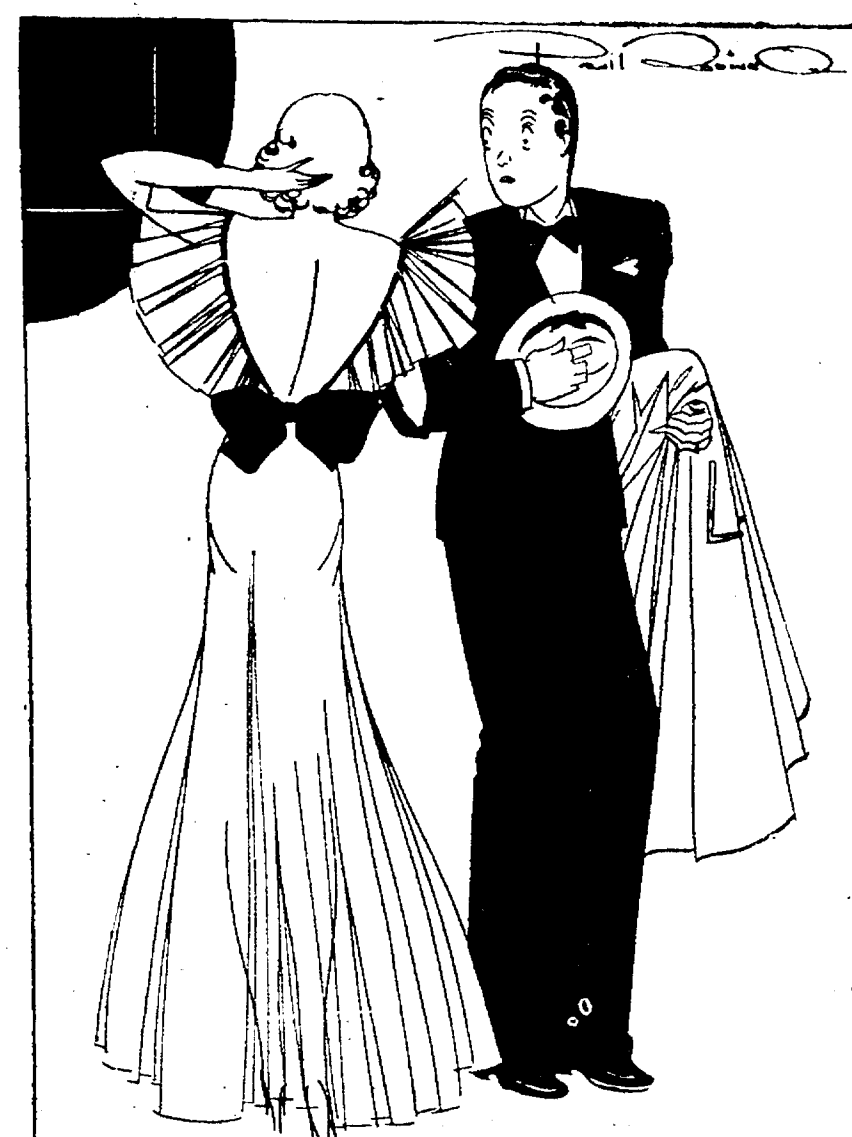

Pattern 9212 may be ordered only in sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, 20, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42. Size 16 requires 3½ yards 39 inch fabric and ½ yard contrasting.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for EACH MARIAN MARTIN pattern. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, the STYLE NUMBER and SIZE of each pattern.

Do not miss our WINTER PATTERN BOOK of smart, easy-to-make clothes designed by our style authority, MARIAN MARTIN. Styles for every age and all occasions. PRICE OF BOOK FIFTEEN CENTS. BOOK AND PATTERN TOGETHER TWENTY-FIVE CENTS.

Send your order to The Herald Pattern Department, 124 W. Main

TRACK CLEARED FOR PROGRESS

THE final month of 1934 finds America with a mere substantial basis for confidence in faster progress toward recovery, than has existed at any time since the depression entered upon its more acute phases. The financial world, for one thing, is reassured and the benefits of its changed state of mind are reflected in many ways.

One of the most impressive evidences of improvement is to be found in the fact that the national income, which dropped from $86-106,000,000 in 1929 to $49,560,000,000 in 1933 is expected to show an increase of about $9,000,000,000 for the current year.

Furthermore, security quotations have recovered to the best level since mid-summer and some progress has been made toward stimulating a demand for the so-called durable goods—machinery and other factory equipment, railroad rolling stock, electrical appliances, automobiles and trucks.

Farmers' incomes for the first nine months of this year were $834,000,000 more than for the corresponding period of last year. Export trade has revived somewhat and even real estate in many cities throughout the country is showing renewed life. Disturbances between employers and workers have become less frequent and less serious and a most heartening circumstance is the certainty that the Christmas shopping season, which is now under way, will be the best in four years.

With apprehension vanished, substantial gains accomplished during the last four years and the track cleared for the drive ahead, the new year gives every promise of the restoration of a generous measure of the prosperity normally enjoyed by the nation.

AUTO INDUSTRY LEADS

THAT business can be stimulated by artificial means is demonstrated at this time each year by the automobile industry. Unlike most enterprises the automotive industry goes after business instead of waiting for business to come to it. It has developed its own art of "making" business.

Perhaps the greatest trade stimulant ever invented was the annual introduction of new automobile models and the automobile shows at which they are exhibited. They come along when the tide of this business is at its ebb and have never failed to produce enough demand to keep the entire industry going through the winter months.

The new cars and shows are certain to arouse widespread interest in motors and motoring with resultant benefits to those enterprises which depend for existence on the motor car, and that means more business and less depression.

What a pity the steel industry cannot bring out new models every year! Many divisions of the textile industry do, as do also many small enterprises. But it seems that American initiative and ingenuity might profitably go in for more artificial trade stimulants.

A free man is one who will not submit to dictation except in the privacy of home.

Don't blame the rich guy. He wouldn't act superior if other people didn't act inferior.

CAROLINE by RUTH DEWEY GROVES

CHAPTER XXIX

The jigsaw puzzle was not all put together that night; Caroline completed it the next day, and was glad that Malcolm was not with her when she saw the full picture.
It was, she believed, part of a dream that he had woven about her —a dream as old as life itself. As she looked at the picture—a beautiful little cottage, as exquisite and perfect in architectural detail as any mansion she had ever seen, she could not help but feel that it was a dream. She had loved her, her lovely as the house was, he would hardly wish to own it unless he had found the girl he wanted to be his mistress. It was going to be harder than ever to tell him now that someday she was going to marry Howard, day she was going to reveal the truth gradually to Malcolm.

In the evening Malcolm came with a library book she had asked him to get for her. He saw Howard's flowers in a bowl on the table near the davenport. But this time he did not exclaim about them. His face, when he turned to Caroline, showed that he had been surprised. A slightly blank look remained upon it until he took his departure. Their conversation had been dull by a hint of restraint between them. Caroline did not speak of the flowers, either.

Howard continued to bring flowers, and other gifts. After the first few days the neighbors to each other. Mrs. Stuart saw Howard's car at the curb before the Rutledge house every afternoon for nearly a week before she spoke of it to Malcolm. And even then she did not tell him of the books and magazines, the baskets of fruit and many boxes he brought.

For a long time she had been troubled about her son and the girl next door. Her intelligence had accepted the fact that however poor the Rutledges might be, there was still a difference between their station and Malcolm's. They had family distinction in the past at least, while she couldn't think of an outstanding member of her family or her husband's. Malcolm's father had been a fine man—a good worker and honest, but it might be that Caroline Rutledge would look higher than his son when it came to choosing a husband.

Certainly she knew that Caroline was not encouraging Malcolm. She couldn't understand how Caroline could help loving him and wanting him, unless it were a snobbishness she had never shown that was holding her back. They did their best, she admitted—Alva Rutledge and her daughter—to be easy and natural with her. She had been amazed at the change in the mother, but she sensed a subtle difference in her relations with Mrs. Rutledge and the other women in the neighborhood.

She feared that Malcolm was eating his heart out over a hopeless love. She watched him like a hawk, and it was not long after Howard began calling on Caroline that she saw signs of unhappiness in his face.

It was she who first voiced the matter. She did not know Howard's name—she had never been in the Rutledge house when he came and Caroline had not had to introduce her. There were still many ill of the typhoid in South Town and she was little time for idle visiting. But she did know that this strange young man whom she took to be her son's rival, was very good looking and apparently wealthy.

Howard is she looking—Miss Rutledge? she asked Malcolm one evening when he returned from seeing Caroline. "I haven't been over there today."

"Better," he said shortly.
"I'm not wonder. She's having a lot of company these days.
There's some young man comes to see her every afternoon—but maybe she's told you."

"No, she hasn't."
Mrs. Stuart sighed and shook her head. "I don't think she's the kind to be hiding anything," she remarked.

"Why should she hide anything from me? I'm nothing more than a friend. The place looks like a flower shop," he added crossly.

"Hothouse flowers, and we've a yardful of asters and chrysanthemums," Mrs. Stuart said. "Do you think money makes a lot of difference to her, Malcolm?"

"No," he said loyally, "but it's natural enough that she should have friends with money. You know she cut them all out when she moved here, but being sick—well, it gives this fellow a chance."

"It looks to me like he's making the most of it," Mrs. Stuart averred.
"That girl is no trifling Sissy Cal-den, Malcolm. Probably is, she's as serious about him," she added gently, hating to hurt him but wanting to make certain that he was aware of what might happen.

"Yes," he said dully, "she probably is."

There was silence for a moment.
Six years ago, Malcolm's prompted her gesture. Malcolm's fingers tensed in his palms, but he did not touch her.

"I've been a coward," she said miserably. "I've known for days that I'd not go with you this afternoon, Malcolm."

"It's all right," he said stiffly.
"Do you remember, you told me you didn't want me to fall in love with you. There was some one else, even then. Well, I'd be a dog in the manger not to hope you've found your happiness at last."

Caroline leaned back against the table on the porch. Her hands grasped its edge. She was trembling violently. Malcolm turned to go.

"Wait," she said, catching her breath sharply. "I want to talk to

Unforgettable

Whether 29-year-old Rush Holt will be allowed to take his Senate seat next month is still a moot question. But the youthful West Virginian already is having his troubles with job hunters. He tells this story on himself: Election night he did not retire until nearly dawn. But at last, his friends departed and he turned in. Hardly had he fallen asleep when he was awakened by a vigorous ringing of his door bell. At the door was a stranger. "Senator," he said, "you may not remember me. But I voted for you and I got friends to vote for you. I'm looking for a Government job, and I thought I'd get my application in early."

"I'll do my best for you," Holt said. "You come and see me when I get to Washington."

"You won't forget," the caller asked. "You'll remember me?"

"Always," Holt replied.

And there was a ring of conviction in his voice which the visitor may not have appreciated.

WHITE STANDS PAT ON HIS DEMAND FOR INCOME TAX

STATE SENATE ACT IN DOUBT

Governor Will Allow Voted Sales Tax To Die On Desk,
He Declares.

COLUMBUS, Dec. 10. Gov. George White stood pat today on his demand to the Ohio legislature that he will veto the $500,000,000 retail sales tax unless the lawmakers also pass an income tax.

In passing the responsibility for an emergency tax program back to the legislative branch, he stated emphatically and in unmistakable language that "unless I have on my desk a fair and just income tax bill before the expiration of the 10 days allowed me in the consideration of bills, I shall return without my approval the sales tax already adopted."

"Will the state senate, which overwhelmingly defeated the income tax the lower house passed, reconsider and adopt it?" was the question uppermost in the minds of everyone following the battle between the governor and the legislature.

In the opinion of most observers there was not more than the remotest possibility of an income tax being adopted by the present senate which clearly stated its opposition to such legislation in a decisive 19-to-8 adverse vote on the Ward bill.

Because of previous expressions from members of the senate it was doubtful whether even a quorum would be present on Dec. 12, the date set for sine die adjournment in a joint resolution adopted by both houses.

When the joint resolution was adopted last Friday, it was the intention of both houses to hold only perfunctory sessions next Wednesday, attended by a handful of members, for the purposes of signing the 14 measures to which the presiding officers did not affix their signatures last Friday.

For all practical purposes, the members of the house and senate considered the sessions of the 90th General Assembly at an end when they returned home last Friday. But now the governor is insisting that the senate, at least, return in full strength and pass an income tax.

The senate, it has been demonstrated on numerous occasions, can be as stubborn as the governor. Since he has decided that the breakdown in schools and local government will not occur prior to next March 1, it would not be surprising for the senate to at least share that assumption and tell him to veto the sales tax if he so desires.

Passage of an income tax at this late date involves more than ratification by the senate, as difficult as that alone would be. Assuming for the moment that the upper house would agree to an income tax, no one believes it would swallow the 2 to 9 per cent rates contained in the Ward bill the house adopted.

Amendments to the bill in the senate would necessitate concurrence by the House, where the chances of a quorum returning to the capital was even smaller than in the senate.

VETERAN SUICIDES

COLUMBUS, Dec. 10. The Scioto river had taken another victim today after Edward Pruitt, 36-year-old negro, a war veteran and resident of the state hospital for the insane here, leaped off the Broad street bridge after beating his wife with a milk bottle.

Pruitt believed in fair mental condition had been permitted the freedom of the hospital grounds but he walked away Sunday morning.

Great Salt Lake

Bathers cannot sink in its waters

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is one of a series of instructive articles on points of interest in the world.

By Central Press.

IN ONE of the great valleys of the Rocky mountains, near Salt Lake City, lies Great Salt Lake, a sheet of salt water 75 miles long and 30 to 50 miles wide. Thousands of tourists visit the lake annually to enjoy the novelty of a bath in its waters which are so heavy a body easily floats.

The average depth of the lake is 20 feet, and its position is at approximately 4,218 feet above sea level. Owing to the variation of rainfall in the region its size fluctuates. In 1850 its area was 1,750 square miles; in 1860 the area was 2,170 miles. The water is a natural brine, containing 14 to 23 per cent of saline constituents. The amount of salt in the whole basin has been estimated at 400,000,000 tons, and its manufacture is an important industry.

First mention of the lake was made by Baron La Fontaine, in 1689, his information being obtained from Indians. It was first explored and described in 1843 by Fremont.

Several species of insects and a small type of shrimp have been found in the waters.

Soybean Cashes Climaxed By Offer of Dollar Saturday; Others Up Too.

The Chicago price of soybeans advanced 10 cents to 1.10 a bushel on Oct. 23, the highest price in the history of the market.

The climb was attributed today by the Chicago Board of Trade to the fact that the soybean crop in the United States is expected to be smaller than last year's.

Chicago prices for soybeans on Oct. 23 were as follows: Soybeans, 1.10; Soybean meal, 1.10; Soybean oil, 1.10.

DAFOE AMAZED BY NEW YORK

Says He Expects Dionne Quintuplets To Be Normal;
"Fairy Tale," He Says.

NEW YORK, Dec. 10. Dr. Alan Roy Dafoe, the timberland physician who ushered the Dionne quintuplets into a surprised world and performed a medical marvel by keeping them alive, is in New York today, seeing for the first time the wonders of a modern metropolis.

"It's a big place," he said. "Just as wonderful as I expected and more so."

Dr. Dafoe, small, twinkling, colloquial, peered at the shining towers of the great city with eyes accustomed to the quiet fields and rocky farmland of northern Ontario. His hand that spanned the squirming sisters Dionne into life, easily pumped the hands of celebrities. His ears, used to the smooth, soft silence of a snow-blanketed log country, listened alertly to the urban cacophony of rumbling subway trains and rattling "tels" and the chatter of millions.

"TIME OF LIFE"

"I'm having the time of my life," he said. "It's a little unreal, but it's lots of fun."

He smiled, his brown eyes lit with humor behind gray-rimmed spectacles.

"It is a fairy tale, isn't it? Five babies born up north there—that's amazing. Then, to make it more amazing, they live. And a country doctor that nobody ever heard of—me—becomes famous overnight and gets whisked into all this. No—it doesn't seem real," he declared.

Leaving his "girls," the five dark-eyed babies for the first time since their birth last May 28, Dr. Dafoe made the journey to "civilization" for a two-fold purpose—to lecture on the birth of the quintuplets and to see, out of the curiosity born of 27 years in the wilderness, what big cities were like.

He left the "quints" well and happy—five plump testimonials to a modern scientific miracle.

They're getting better looking every day, he added, and every day growing more identical.

All five are bright, I am quite sure they will be normal mentally as well as physically when they grow up. They notice everything. When we feed them we sometimes have to put a cloth over their eyes so they won't get frisky and want to play."

unravel the tangled case with its many rumors and reports, one of which is that Kennamer and Correll had planned an extortion plot aimed at Miss Virginia Wilcox, daughter of H. P. Wilcox, wealthy Tulsa oil man and had quarrelled over their plans.

Police were also investigating robberies ascribed to a gang of youths headed by Kennamer. Kennamer, however, had denied participation in any hold-up.

According to police, Born was shot shortly after he had been shown a telephone conversation with Kennamer.

Reports that Kennamer had attempted to end his life by hanging in his jail cell following the phone conversation with Born, were denied by jail officials today.

FINAL REHEARSALS BEGIN FOR COMEDY

Final rehearsals for the home town play "Crashing Thru" are being held and everything is ready for a big show. The play is to be given at the Grand Opera House on Wednesday and Thursday, and is sponsored by the Royal Neighbors Lodge. "Crashing Thru" is a three act musical comedy with a usual and different situations which makes it one of the best shows of the season.

One of the special features of the third act which takes place in 1958 is the group of inspectors. These men are from Washington and must inspect every bride and issue her marriage licenses. There are more than the one needed today and the subjects of the inspection are numerous. These inspectors arrive in rocket planes under the leadership of their chief, Charles Kirkpatrick. Among the inspectors you will see Harry Steinhauser, Gordon Dicks, Reginald Wilson, Harold Dowd, Malcolm Russell, Ernie Weiler and John Neuling.

The costumes are all in the 1958 style and promise plenty of fun to play to see the show and to enjoy a full evening of fun with the days of the "gay nineties," a modern radio station, and the life of the future. Tickets may be secured at the Grand box office beginning Tuesday, or advance sale tickets may be exchanged then at no extra charge.

Edwin L. Daley A MEMORIAL

"The Captains and the Kings depart."

There has left us another captain and king. In his passing we mourn; but in the triumph of life that was his, we rejoice.

The life of Edwin L. Daley was a triumph primarily because of his utter simplicity. He believed simply; he spoke simply; he lived simply. Of sham and pretense he was a lifelong foe. It was by no means in his appearance only that Lincoln lived again.

It was for this reason that he found comradeship in the flowers and trees in the rocks and hills. It was where the solitudes were broken only by their beauty and ruggedness that he worshipped. In them, as well as in his fellow-men, he glimpsed the eternal.

The story of Mr. Daley is the epic of America. From humble beginnings, through a half-century's leadership in their schools and civic affairs, he rose to a place where a country and city were proud to call him theirs. As a specialist particularly in the field of elementary education he had few peers in his state.

He worked hard. In fact it has long been an open secret that he worked too hard. Yet the many who loved him find solace in the fact that in his closing years he found time for some of the things he had always wished to do; and that honors in abundance came to him particularly in those years from the varied activities with which he had associated himself.

One task, unfinished, he had looked forward to with keen anticipation. This was a retirement next June when he might give his undivided attention to the completion of several text-books for use in the lower grades by those children to whom he was especially attached. But then, perhaps, it has ever been.

Edwin L. Daley was the rugged individualist. In matters of belief and conduct he was dedicated to by no man. He believed, simply and with conviction, that which the experiences of his own life permitted him to believe; and he did that only which his conscience and his judgment told him to do. He was not always right; but he was seldom wrong.

It is with pride, therefore, that we lay him away. For in him we are reminded of the words of one of his admirers: that life is death, and death life.

Frank Fischer.

MARY LAUDED AS 2-FISTED SOLDIER

COLUMBUS, Dec. 10. Major Emil F. Marx, of St. Mary's, was named today as a "two-fisted soldier," as described here as a "forward, two-fisted soldier."

Pointing to Marx's record as a soldier in the World War, and later as National Guard officer and safety director at St. Mary's, Col. E. O. Layton, assistant quartermaster general, declared "Marx will make a good adjutant general."

Lawlor, who served in company "P" of the 146th Infantry with Marx during the World War, recalled that Marx, then a first lieutenant, was a "hard and tireless worker."

"He is conservative and straight-forward," Lawlor declared, "and he is not a back-slapper."

Capt. L. S. Ostrander of the U. S. Army, assistant in charge of national guard affairs for the fifth corps area, declared that "Marx has an excellent record as national guard battalio commander."

Col. Benson W. Hough, division commander of the guard, said that "Marx's service has equipped him admirably for his new post. He should be familiar with all phases of national guard work, for he has been very active."

In military service almost continuously since 1914, Major Marx enlisted as a private but quickly advanced to first lieutenant. In 1919, after the World War, he became a captain of the National Guard at St. Mary's and in 1921 was made a major.

Under his new appointment, Marx will hold the rank of brigadier general and will handle all the administrative functions of the National Guard.

A World of Cheer in Gifts for All

If other years and other Christmas shopping you've left you with the feeling that there is nothing new and distinctive to choose for gifts—this year will prove a grand and thrilling surprise! For a journey through the crowded aisles of stores and shops leave you with a feeling that manufacturers have spent real time and thought in contriving gifts that are as charming as they are practical. And if you happen to be shopping on a limited budget—don't be downcast—for never before, it seems, has there been so plentiful a supply of moderately priced yet satisfactory merchandise for Christmas selection.

GIFTS FOR WOMEN

There is real opportunity, this year, to give mother, wife, sister or sweetheart, or just the girl friend, a gift that will make her breathe a glowing tribute to your taste and thoughtfulness. Indeed, it's almost impossible to go wrong—so lovely and so varied are the household accessories, the toilettries and decorative objects women adore. If she is fond of lovely china and glassware your problem is simple. There are salad and serving plates, for instance, in a lovely creamy pottery in raised, all-over leaf pattern. They have a cool look that adapts them particularly to the salad or dessert course and they are surprisingly low in price.

AN UNUSUAL TABLE SERVICE

Very striking and effective are the new square glass plates of frosted glass with clear edges. To accompany them come goblets and glasses in various sizes also of frosted glass with clear glass stems and square frosted bases. If you wish to choose a complete table setting there are gorgeous candle sticks to match—the tops hung with long crystal prisms. Ash trays in the same design complete a table setting that every woman who is fond of the original and distinctive will admire.

Another glass table service was in amethyst—plates, goblets and ash trays all matched. The rich amethyst of the glass set off by bases or bands in opaque glass.

GIFTS OF TOILET

ACCESSORIES

A triple mirror in modern design suggests itself for the woman who is fastidious about her dressing table appointments. Exquisite perfume bottles and atomizers in delicately colored glass with lovely etched pattern are also suggested for the dressing table.

ELECTRICAL GIFTS PROVIDE LEISURE AND EFFICIENCY

If you wish to choose gifts that will provide a real opportunity for the greater enjoyment of life—choose electrical fittings. Any woman will bless you for your thoughtfulness if you give some piece of electrical household equipment that will shorten her tasks and provide hours of extra leisure.

ELECTRICAL KITCHEN EQUIPMENT

Outstanding among electrical equipment for the kitchen are the food mixers. There are many excellent examples—all are efficient and save the maximum amount of time in their operation. Some have many attachments so that the housewife finds almost limitless opportunity for their use. Others,

OUR YESTERDAYS—When Morris Invented His Chair, Providing More Comfort to Home

TO HISTORY, William Morris is best known as an artist and poet. To the man and woman who like comfortable home furnishings, he is better known as the inventor of the Morris chair. Morris created his famous living room fixture about 1861 in London when he and some friends established a firm for designing and manufacturing artistic furniture. The Morris chair is designed so that its back can be adjusted to fit the comfort of its user.

GIFTS FOR MEN

If it must be ties, take a tip from the gents. Let the young man who sells them to you really advise you on your selection. Then you'll disprove forever that no woman knows how to pick out a decent tie.

And take this little tip from us. There isn't a man alive who doesn't have visions of pigskin running through his head the night before Christmas. So give the little man a great big gift—a pigskin suitcase or overnight bag. Too much money? Don't despair—there are always pigskin gloves, and he'll love you for them.

What does he like? That depends on your man, but for all of them, they like to be flattered. Does he smoke cigars? Then buy him the most choice kind—he'll believe you think he smokes them all the time! A golfer, is he? Then a new bag for his clubs—and make it the best you can find. Does he entertain a lot? Then some fine, old wine will make a gift that will send a glow through his heart. Books are a gift worth giving. He'll have them forever—and you can always borrow them! What could be a better idea? Or a subscription to a magazine that you know he'll love. Any every time the magazine arrives, who do you suppose he'll think of? It's justifiable scheming, all the same.

TAKE IT EASY!

Girl Castaway: Good heavens! Cannibals! Sailor: Now, now, don't get in a stew.

I'm just tickled pink!
You know Jim told me he's going to have our 'phone put back for

FINE FURNITURE, GIFT FOR HOME

If you are seeking a gift that all the family will enjoy—one that will serve for many years—choose furniture. There are so many "occasional" pieces that fit into the decorative scheme of nearly every home that you will have no difficulty in finding one that will fit your plan of expenditure and the taste of the recipient.

TABLES IN MODERN AND PERIOD STYLES

Few homes have enough small tables—the kind that are so obliging about holding cigarettes, magazines and drinks. Nests of tables in both modern and period styles are certain to be an appreciated gift. If the quest is for something very modern look at the low table with composition tops that never, never show rings or burns. They have natural wood or metal bases and are stunning and agreeably low in price.

BRIDGE TABLES AND CHAIRS

Nowadays the bridge table has taken on a smart and sophisticated air. The old-fashioned fold-away kind whose legs never seemed to hold up have been supplanted by smart wooden affairs in striking modern design. Many have chairs to match and any bridge playing friend would welcome such a gift. Then, too, there are some stunning magazine racks in Georgian design that are moderately priced and roomy enough to contain a large assortment of periodicals.

Hanging shelves in both modern and period designs are another gift suggestion in the furniture field.

Occasional chairs; large roomy leather chairs for dad; a sewing chair for mother. Sewing cabinets, desks, stools and bookcases offer themselves to the seeker after gifts that are practical and attractive. So in your search for satisfactory gifts be sure to include furniture as a very likely solution.

CHRISTMAS TABLE DECORATIONS

This year you can make your Christmas table lovely with the many exquisite ornaments designed for its decoration. There are lovely center ornaments of glass fashioned into the shape of poinsettias and mounted on long curved stems that form a decorative base.

Tiny silvery trees to put at each place are hung with crimson holly berries. Sprays of silver leaves to lay down the center of the table. Wee holly wreaths to carry place cards, tiny pots of holly or poinsettia for table favors. Broad ribbons of green or scarlet cellophane ribbon to lay at intervals down the snowy cloth.

Tall Christmas candles in scarlet or white with gold decorations may light the table. Squat candlesticks of painted wood in red or green are designed to support them. There are jolly Christmas favors, pretty nut and bonbon baskets of paper in unusual designs will provide color and Christmas cheer.

Garbo to Go 'Legit'

Greta Garbo

Dispatches from Berlin carry rumors that Greta Garbo, Sweden's gift to the movies, may abandon her Hollywood film career to embark upon the legitimate stage. Friends are quoted as saying Miss Garbo will first "tread the boards" in her native city, Stockholm, afterward returning to America via Broadway.

ABOUT CLOTHES

Maybe you need to be practical. In that case, ask its mother, what the little precious needs most of all. Christmas is one time when that fond parent won't dampen your enthusiasm about giving her youngster gifts. But it's with toys that we're concerned—for after all, that's what youngsters love at Christmas time.

We'd try to know our youngster just as thoroughly as we do our adult friends. Just any old toy won't do nowadays when children have hobbies as much as you and I.

GOOD STAND-BYS FOR BOYS

Of course, you can't go wrong on trains. Big boys and little boys, bad boys and angelic ones, all love trains. And it gives dads a chance to have some fun too. So indulge yourself on trains if you like. They are modern wonders, duplicates of real locomotives. You can spend as much or as little as you like on them. There are some wonders for less than one dollar, and they have a real electric light on the engine. Won't that make eyes bright? Sleds and skates and bicycles are three more gifts that boys

will be sure to appreciate you for. FOR YOUNG BUILDERS

If he loves to make things, then above all, give him a tool chest. There are those that old every-thing a boy needs to make simple bits of furniture, ship models and so forth. There's everything included but the lumber, and we suggest that you buy a bit of that to go along if you value your furniture.

FOR LITTLE HOUSEWIVES

If a mother's helper is on your list, we'd suggest an aid to mother, that you give her one of the little ranges made just for her. Try to get someone else to give her a set of aluminum to go along with your gift—and maybe china. Then just take over the most tedious tasks in the kitchen. There are hampers of sets for washing and ironing—clothes, sewing outfits, and brooms and carpet sweepers that will teach her to take care of her own room.

FOR WEE ONES

To keep the little ones amused, there are simply magnificent bows, wows and kitty cats and bay colored blocks, and endless kinds of rubber dolls. All of which only scratches the surface of the wonders that are waiting to be put into Santa's Christmas pack!

Christmas always raises the question of what to give... and you can always answer that question with CANDY.

Grandpa Late to Christmas Feast

by Charles Frederick Wadsworth

IT WAS past two when celebration of the Christmas party at John Henry's.

The telephone rang. Have had an accident. Do not wait dinner for me.

JAMES S. ESTON.

"Goodness gracious." This from Grandma Eston, who had come on in advance to help Millie. "What do you s'pose has happened?" John Henry grabbed the telephone and called Balltown. He got Doc Wilkins and asked if he had treated Jim Eston. No, Doc said, he "seen him in the mornin' drivin' around in his car."

Other sources of possible information were tried without success. The gay gathering of kinsfolk settled down to apprehensive waiting.

Finally, John Henry said he would drive to Balltown and see what he could learn.

As he was about to leave the driveway for the road, Grandpa's car was seen coming at a dangerous clip. The old man was all smiles as he stopped before the house and alighted.

Grandma, Millie, Jack, Samuel, Mary, Madeline, John Henry and numerous children all asked for an explanation at once.

"This morning," said Grandpa, "I sampled some candy your Grandma had made, and it was so tough I got my upper and lower plates stuck together. I pried, and danged if I didn't pry two jaw teeth out of the plate, on the side I eat on. I simply had to have 'em for that turkey. The dentist said it would take about five hours, as it would have to be vulcanized. But I'm here and okay!"

"And you just did get here by the skin of your teeth, didn't you, Grandpa?" This was from John Henry, Jr.

OUR SANTA CLAUS

THE American Santa Claus is a corruption of the Dutch Santa Nicholas, G. H. Hughes says. "Santa Claus, the name derived from St. Nicholas through the familiar use of Teutonic countries, crossed to America. The direct route followed by him is somewhat open to question. On the way he traded his gray horse for a reindeer and made changes in his appearance."

Journey From Nazareth, Birth of Christ Child

ALMOST two thousand years ago the great emperor, Caesar Augustus, sent out a decree that the whole world should be enrolled. Each one was to go to his own city to the place of his fathers. None were exempt from the decree.

From the hill town of Nazareth two people set out in answer to the summons. One, a tall, bearded figure, his shoulders sagging under the weight of years, and from the continued stooping that his trade as a carpenter necessitated. The other, a young and beautiful woman, her face aglow with a strange, sweet serenity. Their names were Joseph and Mary, and they were going to the distant town of Bethlehem, because they were of the house of David.

The man walked patiently beside the piddling donkey on which the woman was seated. They showed no impatience as others passed them by; nor did they join with any of their fellow travelers in venting anger against Caesar for taking them on such a long and tiresome journey.

Perhaps because of Joseph's age, or of Mary's delicate condition, they were among the last to enter Bethlehem, and to seek a shelter at the inn. They were told that there was no room for them there. Their humble appearance made no appeal to the innkeeper on a night when more prosperous looking guests were crowding the doors.

Disappointed and fearful, they sought further. But they could find no place. Some spoke of a cave outside the town. Joseph looked at Mary and his eyes filled with tears. But she nodded assent. . . . And in that lowly place, warmed only by the breath of oxen, Jesus, the hope and promise of all mankind, was born into the world.—Katherine Edelman.

An Up-to-Date Santa Claus

By Florence Harris Wells

"THERE'S snow stretching as far as we can see in all directions. We've had no possible chance to get out the old car and rattle into town as we planned, and Christmas tomorrow." Tom Lambert looked questioning across their breakfast table at his wife, Lucy. "Do you think we can make the children understand that even Santa Claus couldn't urge his tiny reindeer through such an expanse of snow?"

"I've talked to them about it but their faith is boundless." Lucy's usually cheerful voice had a break in it. "Yet how could we tell that it would snow so long and steadily. But you are better, Tom. We have that to be thankful for."

"Yes, I'm better. Anything is better than being shut up in a stuffy office all day for a man that is used to God's great outdoors. But forget me. It's those three kids I'm worrying about."

It was nearing noon when they heard the whirr of the mail plane over their heads. Mary, Robert and little Tom rushed out to wave greetings.

"Look! Look!" little Tom shouted. "Something's fallen out." Sure enough, a parachute had been released. Slowly but surely it descended toward the little group.

"It's going down the chimney!" Robert shouted.

But it missed the chimney, hit the edge of the roof and came tumbling down in their midst, a gay umbrella of red and green, with a large white bag securely tied to it. Wired to the bunches of holly and evergreens, that bedecked the outside, was a card.

The children stopped tugging at the fastenings and listened attentively while Tom read:

"My reindeer couldn't navigate in such deep snow; so I'm sending your things by air mail, because the air mail man tells me you are such friendly children you must not be disappointed.—Santa Claus."

"I knew Santa Claus wouldn't forget us!" Rob shouted.

"So did I," Mary and little Tom said in one breath.

Lucy and Tom, Sr., looked at each other.

"Some thoughtful pilot," Tom said soberly. Perhaps the air waves carried, to the fast disappearing plane, the "Merry Christmas" the little family shouted to their air man Santa Claus.

Making Sugar Toys

Sugar toys may be made according to the following directions: 4 pounds of sugar, 2 ounces of corn syrup, 1 pint of water. Boil to 240-242 degrees, then stir until cloudy and pour in plaster of paris molds that have been drained after soaking in cold water for two or three hours.

Christmas Trees

By MARJORIE HAYES
in Boston Herald

NEARLY every one has a Christmas tree nowadays, but if you had been a child in America a hundred years ago the chances are that you might never have seen one. The custom was universal in England many years before it was very common here, except in communities of German or Scandinavian settlers. For it was in Germany that the Christmas tree had its origin. There are several different legends in regard to it. Here is one which dates from the Twelfth century:

An English monk named Winfred who had gone as a missionary into Germany, came upon some priests about to sacrifice the young prince Asulf to the god Thor beneath the "blood oak." He stopped their ceremonies and ordered them to cut down the oak, whereupon a young fir tree appeared in its place which Winfred told them signified the tree of life, or of Christly living. From that time Germans who became Christians made the fir a part of the Christmas festival, decorating three days in the house, while the fir remains in good condition much longer. There are several ways in which you may distinguish them, first the cones. Those of the spruce hang downward while the cones of the fir are held erect.

The spruce tree is pyramidal in shape, the long cones hanging from the branches near the top. The needles are arranged in spiral rows around the stem, those at the top pointing sharply upward. They have three or four distinctly angled sides. Some common varieties are the red, black, white and Norway spruce.

Fir trees in various sections of the country are the balsam fir which grow abundantly in the mountains and which we find displayed in our markets at Christmas time. The fir is shaped much like the spruce, but the needles are flat and blunt, and usually spread feather-wise from two sides of the stem only. They are dark green above and silvery beneath. The dark purple cones stand erect, glistening with balsam near the top. Balsam also exudes from the trunk, and is used for medicine. The fresh needles are used as a stuffing for sweet-smelling balsam pillows.

Another evergreen sometimes used as a Christmas tree is the hemlock. It is more slender than the spruce, with feathery waving branches which grow very close to the ground. The needles are arranged in two flat rows on the twigs, and have tiny stems. They are soft, and silvery underneath. The cones are tiny, growing at the ends of the twigs. The bark is used in tanning leather. Wreaths made of branches with little cones on them are very lovely.

Christmas Gift Buying Simplified This Year

Gift Buying as Well as Getting Is a Real Joy This Christmas.

The air is electric with excitement! Shoppers are beginning to fill the stores. There's a happy, jostling feeling permeating the atmosphere that comes at no other time. Say what you will about Christmas, admit that it's fun to shop! The thrill that comes when you enter a shop with your purse bulging, or your credit up to snuff, ready to buy for Johnny and Sally and Jim, comes at no other time.

PLAN YOUR LIST

But let us warn you. The counters in practically every store in town are such tempters that it is well to have a fairly clear idea of what you want to buy. Otherwise, we don't guarantee that you will not be led astray.

But if list planning gets to be a chore, give it up. You'll see just the right thing for every name down there when once you get properly started on one of the most interesting adventures of the year.

KNOW YOUR LIST

One of the easiest ways to plan a gift list is to actually think about the person you are buying for. If everyone would, think how many less things would be tucked away into drawers never to see light of day again—or sent into a scrap basket—because it would simply be taking up space.

FOR THE FRIVOLOUS

To your young and up-and-coming sister and of those girls who is invited everywhere that's worth going? Then her gift will present almost no problem at all. There are heaps of things that come tumbling along which would throw her into ecstasies.

Think how she yearns for a silver fox muff. Yes, if she knows her fashions, she'll be emphatic about silver fox. She could carry it with her perfectly plain fur coat—or her cloth coat, and be the envy of all her friends. Price appalling? Then leave that for her father to buy. But how about one of the clever compacts that are decidedly new this Christmas. Maybe she has a dozen already, but don't for a minute think that a new one won't thrill her.

Scarfs are another easy solution, and one that will make her glad for you. Be sure the scarf is a square one, because she loves to tie them 'round her neck. Kerchiefs, fashion, and she wears one with practically every sports costume. So even a dozen of them wouldn't be amiss.

No matter how hatched a gift might seem to you, if it's something to wear, Miss 16 to 21 will be over-joyed. Hosiery, bags, gloves, a trinket for her fingers, neck, ears—these are the things she wants most of all for her Christmas.

NOW FOR HOMEMAKERS
Everyone has someone on their

list that puts her home first. A bride perhaps—an aunt who lives in the country—a friend who has her smart city apartment. All these would love something to make their home more comfortable or decorative.

TABLE LINENS

How grand your gift of this nature depends upon the size of the check you intend to make out. You can find banquet cloths that are the dream of every hostess. And there are some darling breakfast and bridge sets that would be an addition to any linen closet. Don't forget, too, for little gifts, you can give cocktail napkins, fingertip towels, lipstick towels. These cost so little and yet are truly useful and most attractive gifts.

There is no end to the different decorative bits that a home would welcome. Book ends and smoking sets looking decidedly new for this era of moderns. Lamps and little occasional pieces are safe to buy only when you know the home and the tastes of the person to whom you give the gift. This year drinking accessories take their place in the Christmas gift list, and there are so many novelties that it will be the greatest fun to choose.

1,508 OWNERS OF HOMES GIVEN HELP

Loans to the amount of $4,837,503 were disbursed to 1,508 distressed small home owners in Ohio during the week ending December 6th, according to the weekly report of State Manager Henry G. Brunner, of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, given out today.

Of the above amount, $4,275,950 was covered by the Corporation bonds exchanged with former mortgages, and the balance of $561,553 was paid in cash to county treasurers for back taxes, for accrued interest on the bonds, necessary repairs, attorney's fees, and appraiser's fees.

Lamson at Hearing

David Lamson

David Lamson, former manager of the Stanford Press, is snapped leaving the courtroom at San Jose, Cal., during his hearing on a motion to dismiss the murder charge against him. Convicted and sentenced to hang for the asserted slaying of his pretty wife, Lamson received new hope when the state supreme court granted him a new

GAY NEW DRESS FOR ANNUAL TREE

Time was when the Christmas tree to be well dressed followed one conservative mode—it was pretty, of course. It had light and color and brilliance—but dare we suggest that in these days it may seem just a trifle old-fashioned? Of course Christmas is an old-fashioned institution, but if your house or apartment is furnished in modern style you'll have to admit that a modernistic Christmas tree can be extremely effective.

A SILVER TREE

One very gorgeous tree was sprayed all over with silver paint. Long festoons of silvery "snow" were hung from its branches, and silver lights and ornaments were used in profusion. It was as cool and frosty as a pine tree in a snow-laden forest and most effective. Another tree—also silvered—was hung with blue lights that gave a moonlight look that was charming.

It is possible to create very striking effects by using lights and ornaments in one color or in two boldly contrasting tones. One tree we saw was really not a tree at all but a structure of silver painted wood, very simple and modern in its lines. The lights were set on the "branches" at cleverly placed intervals and the effect was as "up-to-the-minute" as the most advanced modern could wish.

A very lovely tree that used all the old-time ideas in ornament with modern improvements was extremely decorative and beautiful. Long strands of popcorn were dipped in gilt paint and festooned on the tree. Gingerbread men were hung from the branches by scarlet ribbons. The most unusual and amusing ornaments were chosen, and the whole lighted with varicolored lights set in reflectors to match.

Retrial Brings Death

NAME DELEGATES TO FARM BUREAU

Perry L. Green, Hiram, president of the Ohio Farm Bureau, and George L. Cooley, Dover Center, president of the Farm Bureau Mutual Automobile Insurance company, have been selected to represent the farm bureau of Ohio at the American Farm Bureau federation convention, to be held at Nashville, December 10, 11, and 12. Two alternate delegates, J. M. Hodson, Pioneer, and Ray Ascham, Findlay, will also attend the national convention. Other officials and members of the farm bureau, including W. E. Stough, on the board of trustees; James R. Moore, editor of the Ohio Farm Bureau News; Silas Vance, of the Farm Bureau Cooperative Association; Murray D. Lincoln, secretary, and L. A. Taylor, assistant secretary, of the Ohio Farm Bureau Federation, also plan to attend the three-day farm session.

Cordell Hull, secretary of state, will be the featured speaker at the convention, speaking on "The American Farmer and Reciprocal Trade Treaties." Henry A. Wallace, Chester C. Davis, Dr. George F. Warren, and David Lillenthal, director of the Tennessee Valley Authority, will also appear before the convention delegates. Several thousand persons will be in attendance at Nashville for the farm bureau nation-wide congress.

WHEAT PRICES ARE GOVERNED BY COUNTRIES

Importing Nations Encourage Home Production; Others Aid Exports.

A dozen countries, both importers and exporters, now have regulations governing wheat and wheat prices. Importing countries have raised tariffs against imports of wheat to encourage home production of the crop, and exporting countries are attempting by various means to expand export outlets in order to retain or regain export trade.

Canada attempts to regulate supplies through marketing controls. Each province enacts its own legislation to this end. A control board is set up by some of the provinces, which has absolute control over wheat sales. Control regulations does not apply until the wheat crop exceeds a certain amount.

In Argentina, a price is set for wheat which is not the equivalent of 63 cents a bushel. At any time the price of wheat falls below this, the government buys wheat and sells it at current market prices. The government stands the loss in these transactions. Also, the Argentine government advances credit loans on wheat for short term periods.

In Australia, the government gives a direct subsidy to wheat growers. About $12,000,000 is distributed to growers on an acreage basis. Payments amount to about 7 cents a bushel. The government has set aside money to provide a bounty sufficient to maintain a 60-cent price for wheat at point of export. This bounty has been needed, as yet because the price at Sydney is about 70 cents. Funds for the bounty are derived from sales of wheat flour amounting to $17 a ton, from state revenues and from an excise tax on flour.

In Chile, an agricultural export board buys wheat from producers at $1.61 a bushel when there is a surplus for export. The home market is protected by a tariff. When the world market rises to $1.91 a bushel, wheat may come into Chile duty free.

In Germany, a deficit country in wheat production, the tariff on imports of wheat is $1.62 a bushel. All imports are handled through a government office. If anyone wishes to port wheat through ordinary trade channels, the tariff is $3.86 a bushel. All exports of wheat are prohibited. Prices are fixed. In the Berlin district, this price is equivalent to $2.14 a bushel.

USE REQUIRED

Until recently, German bakers were required to use 100 per cent home-produced wheat in their bread. A recent shortage caused the government to lower this percentage temporarily to 80 per cent. It has estimated imports for flour purposes by requiring bakers to use 100 per cent domestic wheat in flour. Since a bushel of wheat has been advanced in price to $1.39 a bushel.

The United Kingdom has a tariff preference to wheat countries. A production subsidy is given to wheat growers guaranteeing a minimum price of $1.10 a bushel. The estimated market price this year is 77 cents a bushel, so that a tariff of $1.10 placed upon wheat would result in a profit of 33 cents a bushel to the farmer.

France fixed the price of wheat at the tariff of $2 a bushel. Acreage is allotted to French farmers. Each farmer who sows wheat in excess of his average acreage for the past 5 years is fined $12.50 per acre of excess.

France recently entered the wheat export market. She pays a bounty of $1.63 a bushel on exports. French farmers also produce wheat behind a tariff wall. The minimum duty is 85 cents, the maximum $1.71.

Cholera Is Spread by "Carriers"

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D. United States senator from New York. Former Commissioner of Health, New York City

LIKE TYPHOID fever, yellow fever and smallpox, at one time cholera was feared by those living everywhere. Though originally a disease of the tropics it was carried to all parts of the world because of the faulty maritime regulations and careless quarantine.

Although cholera still appears in parts of Asia and South America, with occasional outbreaks in the Philippine islands, the number of cases and deaths are much smaller than they were a few decades ago. Though the disease has not recently appeared in continental United States, we must not disregard its appearance in neighboring countries and every effort must be made to prevent its occurrence. When cholera occurs it can always be traced to poor enforcement of hygienic laws or improper control of epidemics.

Germ Carriers

One of the important duties of the United States public health service is the prevention of the introduction and spread of infectious diseases from foreign countries.

Cholera is caused by a germ called the "spirillum cholerae." This germ is also known as the "comma bacillus," because under the microscope it closely resembles the punctuation mark, the comma. The germ is found in contaminated food and water and is quickly spread by faulty sewerage and other sanitary defects. The germ is transmitted to man by soiled fingers, food, flies and contaminated clothes.

Until the germs of cholera can be completely eradicated, the disease will continue as a menace to civilization. Like many other communicable diseases, cholera is spread from one section of the world to other parts by the so-called "carrier." The carrier is a person who carries the germs of cholera without being aware of it. He presents no outward complaint, yet harbors the germs of the disease. Unfortunately, it is difficult to detect cholera carriers.

The detection of all persons who harbor the germs of cholera would be a gigantic task. But it is probable that this will be accomplished at some future date.

Our increasing insistence on clean shops, the proper care of foodstuffs and the cleanliness of food handlers have accomplished wonders. We escape many ailments that menaced our fathers.

Doom of Mississippi Packets

Steamboating on the Mississippi received its first setback in the general disruption of ordinary business caused by the Civil war. And it was just beginning to recover when more sinister opposition appeared in railroad competition and as the steamboats supplanted the old hand-propelled broadbills and keel-boats of an earlier time, so the speedier railroads gradually took away all through river traffic and the great Mississippi packets were a thing of the past.

Favorites From Afar

The greatest fault of foreign recipes which we examine with thoughts of preparing in this country, is that too many times the ingredients are not available. In some countries where black bread is common, white bread made from wheat flour is quite a delicacy. That is due to the fact that these are not wheat growing countries, and imported grains are more expensive.

Canned fruits are considered a luxurious extravagance in Sweden we are told, while to us a canned fruit dessert is a commonplace serving. Here is a Swedish favorite—fruit pudding. It is served with afternoon coffee.

Swedish Fruit Pudding

Stew dried apricots and prunes until tender, without adding any sugar while cooking. Place a layer of fruit in a serving bowl, then a layer about 1/2 inch thick of toasted bread crumbs that have been buttered and sweetened. Then add another layer of fruit, then crumbs, then fruit, until the top of the bowl is reached, or the desired quantity of pudding is made.

Pojaharsky Koley

A Russian meat serving made with veal or chicken has an unusual taste. Use:

- 1/2 loaf of white bread
- 1 1/2 C. milk
- 1 pound of veal, chopped
- 1 onion, chopped fine
- 1 C. hot melted butter
- 2 eggs
- 2 Tbsp. water
- Bread crumbs
- Salt and pepper

Cut off the crust from the bread and soak it in milk. Squeeze almost dry and mix with the chopped veal. Add onion browned in 2 Tbsp. of the butter, and add salt and pepper to taste. Beat one egg, and add to the mixture with the water. Mix well. Make into oblong rolls. Beat the other egg. Dip the rolls into this, then into the bread crumbs, and fry them in the remaining butter.

Sauer Milch Pfannkuchen

(Sour Milk Pancakes)
1 C. flour
1 egg, well beaten
1/2 tsp. salt
Sour milk
1 tsp. baking powder

Sift the dry ingredients together. Add the egg and enough sour milk to make a batter the consistency of very heavy cream. Heat the fat a quarter inch deep in a frying pan. Drop spoonfuls of batter into the pan and let them form small cakes. Fry until a golden brown on each side. Serve immediately with tart jelly or apple sauce over them.

Chinese Chop Suey

- 1/2 C. onions
- 3 Tbsp. fat
- 1/2 tsp. salt
- 1/2 tsp. pepper
- 1/2 C. celery, chopped
- 2 C. cooked fresh ham, diced
- 3 C. chicken meat stock
- 1 C. water
- 1 can Chinese bean sprouts
- 1 tsp. brown sugar
- 2 tsp. soy sauce

Saute the onions in the fat. Add the salt, pepper, celery and meat which have already been cooked, the meat stock which has been thickened with 1 Tbsp. of flour to 1 C. stock, and the water. Cook slowly for about 30 minutes. Then add the Chinese sprouts, drained, and brown sugar to the mixture. Heat thoroughly before serving with soy sauce.

Edison Dialectic Decorations

Upon Thomas Edison's second trip to Europe the French Telephone company offered him a decoration which required that he wear a long sash. But the Ohioan flatly refused with the assertion that he couldn't "stand for that." Persuaded by his wife, he did however consent to wear the little red button of the Legion of Honor. But whenever he saw any American approaching he would slip the button into his pocket for fear, as he said, "they might think I am trying to show off."

WRAP IT UP, SEND IT OFF

No matter how busy you are, no matter how many parties and dates you've accepted, don't slight the wrapping of your gift. Think of your chagrin if yours should be the least decorative of any around the Christmas tree! Besides you'll miss a lot of fun, if you don't dress them up.

MODERN PAPERS

You can't exhaust the supply of ideas in Christmas papers. Stick to the good old white tissue if you like. But if your artistry craves for expression, then run wild among the novel papers. You'll find red, and red with silver motifs. You'll find blues. You'll find greens. And you'll find a dozen and one different motifs of decoration. And when you've decided on papers, then cord and ribbon and "fill". There are so many amusing ways that you could tell a Christmas carol with them. We've seen some packages so much like their donors, that there was scarcely any need for a name on the card inside. Try it—it's fun! Try wrapping gifts in plain white crepe paper and tie them up with the very wide cellophane ribbon—make the bow very full and then slash it into a fringe with the scissors—it makes a lovely big pompon atop your package. Some very smart packages may be made by wrapping your gift first with plain green or red paper, then folding a broad band of patterned paper about the center and fastening it with gold or silver stars,

LITTLE ORPHAN MARY'S CHRISTMAS

HELEN GAUSFORD

"SIGHED Mrs. Bonner, 'We have a hundred dollars. Oh, well.' And she tucked the money away in her blouse."

"You don't seem very delighted, my dear," observed her husband. "He laid down his pipe and put an arm around her shoulders. 'What does Bess say?'"

"Mrs. Bonner read snatches of the letter. 'And so,' it finished, 'as we shall be well on our way by Christmas, we are sending you two hundred dollars. I do hope you will get something you really want. We thought of the usual presents, but it seems you have them all and we get down so seldom nowadays that I have no idea what may be in your mind. Remember, now, no saving this. Spend it by Christmas for whatever will make you most happy. Bob sends his regards to you both. Your loving daughter, Bess.'"

"Why, Mother, you're crying."

"No—no, I'm not, John. I'm too old to act like a baby. Only I had so hoped—"

"I know, I had, too. It would have been nice to have had Bess back again for Christmas, and a tree, and dinner—and well, folks around laughing. You know what I mean."

"It just doesn't seem like Christmas any more. Remember when Bess was a baby? Her first doll, and that year she got the cowgirl suit. She cried and cried because she had thought it would have trousers instead of a skirt. I declare, there isn't anything I wouldn't give to have a little girl again—just for Christmas time."

"How nice it would be," she mused. "Maybe we could borrow one from the orphan asylum—"

"And buy her candies—"

"And a doll—"

"And a pink dress—"

"And a cowgirl suit—"

Up went the body and up went the tree. A wreath hung in the window; a plum pudding hung in the pot. Mr. Bonner strung the lights and Mrs. Bonner trimmed the tree—for little Orphan Mary was to arrive that afternoon.

Before things were half ready, she came—a shy little girl, with big, round eyes and soft yellow hair. Her severe little dress was a trifle short, her hat a bit too old, her coat very plain.

The woman from the orphanage made the necessary introductions, wiped Mary's nose, stuck the handkerchief in her pocket and cautioned her to "be a good girl." And then she was gone, and a scared little girl was trying very hard not to cry.

"Do come in and get your things off, Mary," said Mrs. Bonner. "We have a lovely tree, but you're not to look at it until after dark. I thought this afternoon you could help me make cookies. Would you like that?"

"O-oh," said Mary. "I'd love it!"

Somehow this lady made her feel all warm, and not a bit afraid. "I know how to make corned mush all alone," she volunteered.

"How nice! We must have some while you're here—or maybe you'd enjoy something else more," Mrs. Bonner added as an afterthought. "We're going to have turkey Christmas. Do you like turkey, Mary?"

"Now before we make the cookies," Mrs. Bonner directed, "you must first wash your hands. Wait, I'll get you a towel."

"Oh," Mary exclaimed, when the drawer was opened. "What gorgeous rugs!"

"Those are silk pieces. I was going to make a pillow top, but then when we found out you were coming, I stuck them in there. Some of those pieces belonged to my wedding dress, and I wouldn't have anything happen to them for the world." She closed the drawer and hoped Mary dry her hands.

That night when Mary had been tucked away in Bess' old room, the kind-hearted couple sat for a long time in front of the fireplace.

"I am so glad we could get her for a few days before Christmas," Mr. Bonner remarked. "How her eyes popped when she saw the tree! And when we told her that on Christmas morning there would be presents under it for her, it seemed too wonderful for her to believe."

"Yet I noticed a wistfulness in her eyes," his wife answered, "as though something was keeping her from being completely happy."

"She still feels a little strange, perhaps. It will pass."

Mrs. Bonner was surprised to find, next morning, that Mary had closed and locked her door. She answered her knock, however, and appeared promptly for breakfast, apparently perfectly happy. Yet Mrs. Bonner was worried to notice that whenever Mary had an opportunity, she would slip away to her room, lock the door, and stay there until she was called.

They spent one day in town shopping, and on the next made all preparations for Christmas dinner. On Christmas eve they went to church, and heard the old familiar carols. And then Orphan Mary went to bed in high excitement, and Mr. and Mrs. Bonner piled the gifts around the tree.

Christmas morning brought a snowstorm and dark skies. Mrs. Bonner slept lightly, and at the first sound of Mary stirring she got up. A few minutes later she came back to her husband. "John, what did you do with my silk pieces?"

"Why, I haven't seen them, Mother."

window, but the car was quite out of sight.

"Oh," cried Mrs. Bonner, "that poor child! She couldn't stand not having a present to give in return, and so she made for me the one thing I said I wanted." She hugged the pillow close, and her tears spotted one of the best pieces. After a while she heard the car drive into the garage, and her husband's step on the porch. She ran to meet him.

"Look, John! Look what Mary made for me. And I called her a thief! Can't we get her back? She counted so much on this Christmas, and now I've spoiled it all!"

"I wouldn't say that quite, Mother. It can still be the happiest Christmas ever."

"What do you mean?"

"Well, you see, when we got to the orphanage I didn't have the heart to let her go. So instead I went in and asked them for adoption papers. If you want to, we can just sign these up and keep her always."

"Then, where's Mary?"

"Why, she's out in the garage." Mrs. Bonner threw her arms around his neck. "Oh, John, you darling! What a glorious Christmas!"

And they went out together for little Orphan Mary.
